Se puede y se debe:
Educating Heritage Students
KEY TERMINOLOGY

- Heritage language (HL)
- Heritage language learner (HLL)
- Heritage language speaker (HS)
- Heritage culture (HC)
- Second Language Learner (L2)
“A heritage language is a language which was first for an individual with respect to the order of acquisition, but has not been acquired fully because of the switch to another dominant language” (Polinsky 2008).
“Someone who has had exposure to a non-English language outside an education system” (Webb & Miller, 2000).

Overly broad and overly narrow
“Raised in homes where a language other than English is spoken and who are to some degree bilingual in English and the heritage language” (Valdés 2000).
Tangible and intangible items passed down from generation to generation.
SECOND LANGUAGE LEARNER

- Student learns a second language after being proficient in first language.
BILINGUALISM

- Receptive
- Sequential
- Simultaneous

- How each type of bilingualism creates a different curriculum for K-12
TYPES OF CLASSES

HLL

- Students are all at various levels and confident with speaking
- Teachers focus on vocabulary and grammar

Mixed

- Students are intimidated and at a variety of levels
- Cultural Competence
- I.D.

L2

- Students are all at a similar level and confident with grammar/content
- Teachers focus on applying knowledge
ASSESSMENT

- Diagnostic Tests
  i. “Developed for English speakers learning Spanish or English-dominant Spanish speakers” (Otheguy & Toro, 2000)

- Placement Tests
  i. Schools vary placement based on:
     Oral interview, student-self selection, or AP scores
  ii. AP exams focus on listening, speaking, reading, writing, and grammar

- Disadvantages
  i. When schools use various placement tests the students will be at different language levels
     Ex. 2 year institution → 4 year institution
CHALLENGES

- Mixed classrooms are one of the biggest challenges (HHL and L2).
- HLL’s process Spanish differently than L2.
- “This difference in processing results from the fact that heritage speakers have been exposed since early childhood to Spanish. Thus, they have acquired the core language, with a higher or lower degree of proficiency” (Parodi, 2008).
- HLL have different levels of language proficiency and cultural competence.
- However, HLL’s oral communication skills are highly developed, but their reading and writing skills are weaker; they share that it common.
Students have common backgrounds

- The majority of HLL in the Central Washington region share a common background.

- HLL Spanish vernacular stigmatizes them because it is different from standard Spanish.
Some HLL are raised bilingual and incorporate loan words from English in their speech.

“This type of Spanish stigmatizes them because it is considered “incorrect” and uneducated” among monolingual speakers of standard Spanish” (Parodi, 2008).
“Monolingual speakers of Spanish often feel that the introduction of foreign words to their language corrodes the overall integrity and preservation of the Spanish language” (Parodi, 2008).

Monolingual speakers want to keep their language “pure” but HLL Spanish has triggered grammatical and sociolinguistic changes due to their high exposure to English.
Often times, error correction has a negative impact on HLL because it gives them the idea that their Spanish is wrong; therefore, discouraging them from speaking their language.

HLL educators need to know that:

- “The features that these native speakers stigmatize are usually Old Spanish forms that were common in the Spanish American koine spoken in colonial times in Latin America, during the 16th to 18th centuries” (Parodi, 2008).
- Teachers take away from HLL culture when they constantly correct their students.
There are not enough:

- Courses for heritage language learners.
- Trained HLL educators.

HLL’s classes are difficult to teach because of the disparity students have in their development of the language.

Definition:

“Learner-centered teaching that varies instruction and tasks according to individual learner profiles.”

(Thomlinson 2000)
“Differentiated instruction is not about giving a ‘normal’ assignment to most students and a different assignment to struggling or advanced students.”

“Nor is it about assigning a greater or lesser quantity of the same assignment to different students, or grading “easier” or “harder” for different students.”

“It is about assignments and assessments with a different nature altogether.” (Potowski 2014)
