PRESIDENT'S REPORT

Celebrations

Mr. DeSoer, Vice President of Operations, introduced the following nominee for Distinguished Service:

Ms. Teri Bangs has worked in Human Resources for over 25 years. Teri started her career greeting customers to HR as the receptionist. As she took on additional duties and became an expert at detail and process, she progressed to a Human Resource Assistant where she supported the employment process and prepared hiring letters. She has seen the rollout of PeopleSoft, PeopleAdmin, myCWU, the iCAT project, and now finally, online Time and Attendance. Her latest contribution has been to serve as an expert consultant on the rollout of the PeopleSoft hiring module. All along the way, Teri has ensured that new employees, from civil service to faculty, are properly entered into our payroll system. Her great attention to detail has served her and all of us at CWU well, as she has entered data, run reports to check data, corrected data, and probably answered thousands of questions over her career about the ways or our processes and procedures.

Mr. Clark, Vice President for Business & Financial Affairs, introduced the following nominee for Distinguished Service:

Ms. Mary Aho became a CWU employee August 1, 1975 and has been an influential, dedicated and inspiring employee ever since. She will retire just four months before her 40th work anniversary. Mary has held many positions in the Conference Program, culminating to her current position as Conference Program Manager, which she has held since 2013. Not only was Mary dedicated to our conference program, she was also involved in many CWU outreach efforts. She served as an advisor to the International Club and Chinese Students and Scholars Association for over 10 years. Her involvement in UESL was instrumental in not only creating short-term summer programs for international groups, but also created a relationship with Holy Savior High School. This relationship provided Taiwanese students an opportunity to attend CWU. Mary touched the lives of many students, including her student employees. Her care and compassion in her daily interactions at CWU makes her incredibly deserving of the Distinguished Service Award.

Dr. Levine, Provost & Vice President for Academic & Student Life, introduced the following nominees for Emeritus Status:

Dr. Phil Backlund, professor in the Department of Communication, is an outstanding teacher-scholar-citizen, who has brought an extraordinary commitment and a nationally recognized expertise to his teaching, scholarship and service during his 36 years at Central Washington University. He is author or co-author of 7 books, numerous peer-reviewed chapters and articles, and over half a dozen reports. In addition, he has given dozens of presentations at regional and national conferences. Professor Backlund's generosity of service spirit is remarkable and has been recognized nationally and internationally. For his leadership in assessment work, Professor Backlund was twice awarded the National Communication Association's Award for contributions in the area of assessment.

Dr. Larry Gookin has long been considered one of the strengths of the music department and with good reason. Ever since he began his career as Director of Bands for the department 34 years ago (1981), the Wind Ensemble has enjoyed a reputation for being one of the best collegiate wind ensembles in the country. As an expert in wind ensemble conducting, Professor Gookin has earned a reputation that has become almost legendary; he is now regarded as one of the finest wind conductors in the country. While his discipline-specific expertise has earned him a national reputation, it is his personal qualities that have gained the respect of faculty and students alike. Unlike many occupants of the conductor's podium, he is never abusive or overtly demanding and while he expects his students to give their best, it is the respect that he commands that elicits this effort rather than fear or threats. He has developed marvelously efficient rehearsal techniques and he consistently draws from his ensembles performances a level that far exceed the individual capabilities of his players. For future music educators and performers alike, he provides a model of musical leadership that they are privileged to experience. Professor Gookin is a respected colleague and often serves as the "voice of reason" when difficult decisions in the department are being considered.

Dr. Ken Briggs has served Central Washington University for 38 years as Professor, Program Director for Health Education and the Central Wellness Hour, and lately as Department Chair of Physical Education, School and Public Health. He has earned numerous awards including Distinguished Professor and several Most Inspirational Teaching awards, including the Provost/Sr. Vice Presidential Award. He has served as a mentor and inspiration to his students and colleagues over the years. He has produced and published a documentary film on Health Education, a popular Drug Education Book, and articles in a variety of journals. He is a very popular speaker at conferences, workshops, and training throughout the Northwest and continues to assist CWU and the Ellensburg community in a variety of ways.

Dr. Steve Jefferies has taught in the Department of Physical Education, School, and Public Health at Central Washington University since 1986. Dr. Jefferies has received numerous awards and appointments throughout his career, including Distinguished Professor of Public Service. Last March he assumed the elected role of President of SHAPE America, physical education's national organization under which he received the Honor Award in 2013. He was chair of the Executive Committee for NASPE's Council on Physical Education for Children. Dr. Jefferies is probably best known as creator and publisher of www.pelinks4u.org, the monthly online magazine for physical education professionals; he also emails a monthly newsletter, "PE News," to more than 30,000 subscribers. He has written monthly online editorials for the past 14 years, edited several books, and published over 25 journal articles.

Dr. Roy Savoian's leadership and encouragement in the College of Business will have a broad and lasting impact on the success of the university and the Central Washington Community. Dr. Savoian most notably guided the College of Business to AACSB accreditation in 2011. Such accreditation is awarded to only five percent of business institutions globally. Dr. Savoian's strategy to establish program Centers and Institutes has enhanced CWU's stature with the business communities in the Central and Puget Sound regions.

Projects such as the Economic Outlook Conference and Boardroom to Classroom have created opportunities for CWU students to engage with leaders in industry at an influential stage in their academic careers. Most recently, Dr. Savoian founded the Institute for Innovation and Entrepreneurship (I4IE). His energy and commitment to the Institute has resulted in a number of grants to fund programs and competitions that will contribute to CWU, Ellensburg and the region's economy for many years to come. Dr. Savoian's commitment to the university and region extends beyond campus. He serves or has served on boards for the Galloway & Nielsen Foundation, Junior Achievement of Washington, Junior Achievement of Central Washington, the Kittitas County Chamber of Commerce, the Economic Development Group of Kittitas County and many others.

Professor Greg Kummer began his career at Central in 1977 as an undergraduate student. He eventually received a bachelor's and master's degree from Central, and began teaching communication classes here in 1987. His first class was public speaking; he later added print journalism and finally settled in to teaching regularly our Business and Professional Speaking class, which is one of our most in-demand classes campus wide. Professor Kummer loved getting to know students from a diversity of majors, especially through their speeches. It was very gratifying to him to watch many students progress from being shy and afraid to speak, to being more confident in front of a group.

Dr. Tracy Andrews: For the past 20 years, Professor Tracy Andrews has taught socio-cultural anthropology with specializations in medical and environmental anthropology and cultures of Native North America. Working with graduate and undergraduate students, she supports their efforts to reach their academic, career and life goals. Her students have gone on to graduate programs and careers in applied anthropology and resource management. Dr. Andrews received national and regional research awards for projects that became the basis of academic publications in national and international journals, and which regularly included her students as research assistants and co-authors. Her research has contributed to socio-ecological and public health issues as well as cultural heritage preservation in Native American and Latino communities of our region. She has made major contributions to the documentation of our museum collections and developed important collaborations with Native American artists, linguistics experts, and environmental advocates. In addition, Dr. Andrews has been a driving force in the Health Careers initiative at CWU, and has co-chaired that committee for over 10 years.

Dr. Levine, Provost & Vice President for Academic & Student Life, introduced the Distinguished Faculty of the University:

Dr. Wendy Bohrson is this year's recipient of the Distinguished Professor of Research/Artistic Accomplishment. She is a Professor of Geological Sciences, specializing in volcanoes, a topic critical to understanding the inner-workings of planet Earth and a topic that has inspired many a child to delve into science. Since joining CWU in 1999, Dr. Bohrson has mentored dozens of student researchers, received millions of dollars in grants, and published 17 articles in highly respected journals. All of this was done while serving the university in many important ways such as being the Chair of the Geological Sciences Department, chairing the Academic Department Chairs Organization, and chairing the presidential search committee.

Dr. Cynthia Coe is this year's recipient of the Distinguished Professor of Service award. Since coming to Central Washington University, Dr. Cynthia Coe has excelled in her service to the students, the programs, the university, the community, and the global village in which we all now live. At the heart of every service endeavor she has undertaken, and moreover excelled at, is Dr. Coe's profound commitment to the students of this university. She seeks to augment their pedagogy by providing them with opportunities to learn about social justice issues, to ensure their safety on campus, and to equip them with the awareness and wherewithal to live meaningful and productive lives after graduation. Dr. Coe's service, therefore, is wholly in line with the university's mission to teach our students.

Dr. Phil Backlund is this year's Distinguished Professor of Teaching. In addition to teaching students in his "home" program, Dr. Backlund has opened his classes to include students of the Asia University America Program (AUAP). He also has taught students in Macau, Hong Kong, China, Pakistan, and South Sudan. His passion for communication and instruction is not bound by language, country, or culture. In addition to being an excellent teacher and mentor, Dr. Backlund is a proficient scholar. He has authored and co-authored numerous books and book chapters in the communications field, published many refereed journal articles and reviews, and made presentations at professional meetings.

Dr. Maria Roditeleva-Wibe is this year's Non-Tenure-Track Faculty Distinguished Teaching Award recipient. Dr. Roditeleva-Wibe came to us some 15 years ago from Russia, bringing with her a wealth of music knowledge to CWU students. While at Central, she designed and taught a wide range of undergraduate and graduate courses in Music History, World Music, First and Second-Year Music Theory, Class Piano, and, most particularly, Folklore and Ethnic Music. Every class has been enriched by her integration of historical context and cultural insights, providing wonderful examples of the potential of interdisciplinary in course teaching. Teaching both majors and non-majors, she has shown a firm grasp of her subject—and the breath of her understanding is astonishing.

Action – 2015 Faculty Tenure and Promotion

Dr. Levine explained that State law (RCW28B.35.120) articulates the powers and responsibilities of the Board of Trustees to include employment of all university employees, including promotion and tenure of members of the faculty. Each year the board is asked to approve the recommendations for promotion and tenure, which are the result of an extended and comprehensive process.

Not all individuals who start a tenure-track persist through the entire process. However those who are promoted through evaluations in years 2 or 3, and again in 4 and five, generally are recommended for tenure.

Trustees have requested that they be provided information to inform this vote. This year, trustees were able to access, through Faculty 180, evaluations forwarded at each stage of promotion and tenure.

Tenure guarantees continuous appointment within a specific university department. Promotion is the movement from one academic rank to the next, typically from assistant professor to associate professor or from associate professor to full professor. Each process is based on criteria that include performance in teaching, scholarship and service. The cascading criteria include university, college, and departmental standards. There are five consecutive levels of review: department personnel committee, department chair, college personnel committee, dean, and provost, as outlined in articles 9.2 and 22.2 of the collective bargaining agreement (Attachment 1).

This year, 26 faculty submitted records to be considered for promotion and/or tenure. All were recommended for promotion and/or tenure. The faculty members recommended for tenure and/or promotion, effective September 16, 2015 are:

Mr. Erickson thanked staff for providing additional materials for this process. Due diligence was achieved on this approval.

Business and Financial Affairs – Trustees Thompson and Johnson
Information – End of Year Enrollment Update:

Mr. Johnson introduced George Clark who did an enrollment update, budget planning update, FY 2015 cost versus budget update, and budget module (CatPlan) update. Mr. Clark explained that the budget was built on the most likely numbers that we will achieve for enrollment. The hope is to grow 100 students in FY16 and FY17.

Additional money was invested in first-year programs to improve retention. The goal is to increase the fall freshman to sophomore retention rate from 76% to 83%, and the continuing student year-to-year retention rate to 90%. Enrollment is projected to be down about 30 in FY15, but we are on target to increase by about 111 in FY16.

With regard to budget, the decision was made in December to trim our flight plan to align with flat revenue projections. Several months ago a three-part plan was implemented: exempt salaries were frozen this year and next; each division was asked to take a six to 14-percent budget cut; and Academic and Student Life was asked to develop additional revenue streams. Because we took action early and cut budgets this year, three of the divisions will come in under budget this year, and the fourth division is right on target.

Mr. Clark gave a quick update on the new budget module, CatPlan. We have an RCM/Accountability model in place that is a bottom-up approach. Preliminary budgets were loaded on April 27, which is a couple months earlier than in past years. With this new product we have detailed, account-level budgeting versus only goods and services, monthly budgets versus only annual budgets, and access to many leading practice concepts. Cabinet will identify initial FY16 budget priorities at their retreat on May 27. Budget priorities will then be presented to the Budget and Finance Committee (BFC). BFC will then send recommendations to the president. The budget will be presented and acted on at the July 2015 planning retreat.

Information – Voluntary Fees

State law (RCW 28B.15.610) authorized college and university students to voluntarily impose fees or charges upon themselves for a student purpose they identify. Once adopted by the students and approved by the Board of Trustees, the fee is mandatory, unless students subsequently vote to eliminate or reduce it. The RCW reads in part:

Students are authorized to create or increase voluntary student fees for each academic year when passed by a majority vote of the student government or its equivalent, or referendum presented to the student body or such other process that has been adopted under this section.

Approval of the proposed fee by the Board of Trustees is required in order to authorize the university to collect the fee from students, to apply student financial aid toward payment of the fee, to make disbursements from the student fee account, and to account for the funds so collected and disbursed.

CWU has not articulated a process for the adoption of Voluntary Fees and has used different processes to change or adoption a Voluntary Fee, although this process is now being defined.

CWU students have adopted four fees using this RCW:

Athletics

- In 1997 students approved a fee of $35 per quarter in order to “ensure the future of a quality Athletics Program.” Students voted to increase the fee to $42 per quarter in 2009. In June 2014, the Board of Directors of the Associated Students of CWU (ASCWU) voted to increase the athletic fee by $9 per quarter in academic year 2013-14 ($51 per quarter) and $5 per quarter in academic year 2014-15 ($56 per quarter).

Student Union Building and Recreation Center

- In 2001-2002 students approved two fees to fund the construction of the SURC. Quarterly fees of $64.00 for the Union Building and $95.00 for the University Recreation Center were enacted in 2006-2007 when the SURC opened.

Washington Student Lobby Initiative

- In 2008 students approved a $2.00 annual fee to fund participation in the Washington Student Lobby.

Math and Writing Tutoring Fee

- In 2014 students approved a $5.00 quarterly fee to support peer tutoring for all students in the Learning Commons Math and Writing Center.

Voluntary fees that have been proposed and rejected include a $1 annual fee to fund legal services deemed necessary by the ASCWU-BOD. Students rejected this proposal in 2012.

This year, a Voluntary Fee to establish a Student Arts Fund is on the student ballot as this report is being prepared. The fee would impose:

“...A $50 per quarter fee on all full-time students on the Ellensburg Campus, pro-rated for part-time students, establishing an Arts Fund to support a Fine and Performing Arts and Speaker Series as well as expanded co-curricular and extra-curricular activities in the programs of Creative Writing, Dance, Film and Video Studies, Fine Arts, Music, and Theatre Arts.”

The fee proposal comes amidst fear of continued state funding cuts and uncertainty about funding in general, and after several years of budgetary constraint. As a result, the proposal has launched a robust discussion across campus about the appropriate role of a once-obscure fee provision in a climate of fiscal constraint. The proposal also has prompted other units to consider whether they ought to propose the next Voluntary Fee.

Mr. Johnson stated that we must think strategically regarding fees. He asked that Mr. Clark poll his counter parts at the other universities to see what they do with fees. A follow up fee discussion will take place at a subsequent board meeting.

Next Meeting:

Chair Morrison announced that the next meeting of the Board of Trustees is the annual planning retreat, July 23-24, 2015, in Spokane, WA.

Sid thanked Robert Moser for his service on the board.

The meeting adjourned at 2:32 p.m.
