B.O.D. election votes tallied

Many races close; recount of votes needed

By LYNNE MORGAN
Staff Writer

There will be a recount in the race for Director-at-large to the Faculty Senate. The contest is between Carol Fitzgerald and Jeff Casey. Less than a five vote difference separates their totals.

The unofficial election results for the other positions are known, however, because the results from CWU's Western Washington extension campuses have not yet been tallied, the complete ballot count is not available. The results of these races will not be affected by these additional ballots.

The new Board of Director representatives are: Jeff Morris, president; Doug Pahl, executive vice-president; Fred Green, budget and finance vice-president; Director-at-large to Faculty Senate.

Races requiring a recount of votes were: Shelley Larson, director-at-large to facilities planning; Pam Putnam, director-at-large to residence living; and Mark Johnson, director-at-large to clubs and organizations.

"I guess my feeling is that the election process went well," said John Drinkwater, director of student activities.

"The voter turnout was a little above average. We usually get about 1,200 votes that's 14 per cent of the students on the CWU campus voting," he said.

"This year the votes increased to 1,400 to 1,500. This 20 percent vote of CWU students fits the norms of other universities," said Drinkwater.

"The election went smoothly," he said. I feel positive about the election, due to both the number of people running and the number of people voting."

The new BOD members have specific objectives that they want to achieve when they take office Spring quarter.

"Bylaws have to be the major concern," said Pahl. "Before the new board steps in, the bylaws will be going through public hearings and revisions. Student input is crucial to assure their quality."

"It was essential that the quality of the new board be high. The students by voting, did a great job of ensuring that," he said.

"Instead of having multiple responsibilities, the new structure of the Budget and Finance committee will allow more time to be spent working strictly with student finances," said Green.

"I intend to work on the formation and presentation of the Service and Activities committee budget for 1985-86 that we will present to the Board of Trustees," he said.

"I will work toward greater participation in the Central governing process, such as a studnet named to the Board of Trustees," Green said. "I also want to see a more informed student body by pursuing the present BOD's course towards a bi-weekly publication.

"Since this is a new position, I want to have the opportunity to find out exactly what my limitations and expectations are before I promise anything," said Larson.

"I will attempt to make the SUB more active and useful for the students. The one thing I do want to do is to see that we get a student representative on the Board of Trustees," she said.

"I plan to spend Winter quarter researching how we can make better use of the SUB facilities. I hope to conduct a survey of students to discover what activities they want to do, and how informed they are on what they can or can't do and what is there for them," said Larson.

"I look forward to continuing with the present Board's emphasis on structure changes that will give student more input and control," Putnam said.

"I also hope to increase student understanding and interest in these changes and BOD activities by increased two-way communication between the Board and CWU students," she said.

"As soon as I take office I plan to establish a club senate," said Johnson.

"I'd like to get a chance to gain more knowledge of the workings of the organizations on campus by attending the meetings and talking to the officers to better understand what they need and have to offer the students of Central," he said.

Jeff Morris was unable to give a statement to The Observer. He is interning at Olympia, lobbying for the Washington Studnet Lobby. However, Morris will be back at Central on alternating Mondays to attend the weekly BOD meetings.

Editorial & Opinion

Critiques meant to encourage change

By HEATHER COUGHLIN
Editor

As an editor on a newspaper you are tempted to look at the negative things in the community, and editorialize only on those things. The temptation is even greater when the community you serve is a state run university. The target is large and easy to hit.

All too often everything on an editorial page is critical. I know its easier for me to write that sort of thing and people seem to prefer to read it.

There are a lot of things that go on on this campus and in the community that I feel it is necessary to comment on critically, and I intend to do that throughout the quarter.

In this first editorial however, I want to remind everyone about the positive things that are happening here.

Central is privileged to have a nice community in which to operate. The citizens and merchants of Ellensburg put out the welcome mat for us each year, and although tensions flair at times, the relationship between city and campus remains a good one.

Academically, Central is on the move. The average grade point is up and new standards for incoming students are contributing to higher levels of scholarship.

We also have a fine athletic department. Central has produced nationally ranked football teams, basketball teams, swimmers, wrestlers and many more.

A top-notch faculty and staff makes Central a quality place to earn an education. Many of the professors here have received acclaim from their colleagues on a statewide as well as national level.

However, the greatest asset Central has is its students. We are what makes Central what is. Our decisions in student government, residence living, and social activities shape this university. This is an excellent place to be and that is directly attributable to the student body.

There are many things to be proud of at Central, and we hope that as you find them out yourselves you will let us know.

The negative things that are pointed out in the paper aren't an attack on Central, and they aren't meant to tear the university's pride. They are meant to encourage change.

I challenge you to consider the opinions expressed in the paper and if you disagree, let us know. If you agree, do something constructive to bring about change.

Editor:

It was nice to see a small article in The Observer concerning a little known, but large portion of CWU; the Off-Campus Extended Degree Program. However, I am very dissatisfied in the fact that you wrote your article from only one point of view, that of the Dean. In order to get all the facts and be truly objective you should get some of the feelings about the program from the students that are involved.

I agree that the program fills a real need in the community. Most of us here have families and jobs and would have a difficult time completing school without the program. I however take exception with some of the comments made by Dean Putnam in your article.

If Dean Putnam feels that "students in an extended degree program have the same advantages as a student on the Ellensburg campus," she is out of touch with the students here.

One big advantage that CWU campus students have is the use of a library, either to obtain information to do research papers or as a quiet place to study between classes. True, we do have access to the CWU library by phone or computer order, but we need to know the exact book title (no looking for the book that would best fill our needs) and then we wait one to three weeks to receive it.

This is just one of the many iniquities that we survive with in order to finish school. We do appreciate the program and are grateful for the opportunity to achieve what we probably couldn't without it. However, it is a little irritating to read that we have received the same advantages when it is obvious that we don't (even though we pay the same tuition.

My first reaction upon reading "Remarks Criticized" was that it would be best to let Mr. Stratemeyer's letter stand since it seems to prove my point. However upon reflection I felt obliged to respond.

My critic would pack me off to the USSR, Libia or Iran-I can't even go to Belgium. Somehow he feels that I would be happier elsewhere because I am not pleased that cutting back on the arms race does not seem to be the popular opinion here. Unless I have missed something, cutting back on arms isn't popular in any of the places you would send me. So, why would I want to go?

On the issue of pride and war. It has always been my "unintelligent" presupposition that corollary of the "love it or leave it" position is a willingness on the part of the aspiring patriot to defend this country. This entails a willingness, if not a desire to die for that country.

Mr. Startemeyer is no doubt proud to be an American, at least he sees nothing wrong with it. How then can he be unwilling to do his duty? Can he be a sunshine patriot who would jump ship if called upon to risk or give his life for the system through which he hopes to be able to live long and prosperously? Of course not, for then he, not I would be a threat.

Unfortunately, it is not essential that today's students "wish they were dead" in order for some of them to die. I made it through my war alive. Fortunately, I didn't have to kill anyone. I am grateful on both counts. But that was luck. It had very little to do with my wishes. No one I know or knew wished to die, most not even to kill, but many were unlucky. War is hell, but pride seems to impel us to volunteer. In fact, I don't think they can have a war without it.

System 'sucks', still no change

By BRENDA BERUBE
Editor

Obviously we're back. I'm not just talking about The Observer staff, but the majority of students and faculty. It's time to not only start a new quarter, but a new year and it was obvious that we were back on the right campus the minute (or hour) we hit registration.

Every quarter we run an editorial or letter on Central's registration situation, and nothing has changed. With all the griping and moaning everyone does during registration I would guess that everyone seems to realize that the system sucks, but no one has done anything about it. Why?

As a freshman I really had no qualms with the registration procedure and could never figure out why the upperclassmen complained and people, like myself now, wrote editorials to get frustrations out of their system, but now being of a sounder mind and body (neither, thanks to the registration procedure) I understand.

I've never heard so many complaints around campus about registration and the things connected with registration as I heard this quarter.

Sophomores, juniors and seniors complaining they couldn't get into classes they needed for their majors, minors, or even just to finish up their basic and breadth. Professors complaining that their classes are too small, or too big.

We, the students and faculty, must spend hours and hours of the first week of classes doing the infamous ADD/DROP.

Every upperclassman on this campus knows about add/drop. The sheets should be handed out at registration with the scheduling sheets. At this time period professors suffer from writers cramp more than any other time, except maybe correcting final's week exams.

Isn't there something to be done about this? I personally work hard for the money I make to put myself through school and don't feel I want to spend it taking classes that I don't need or have no interest in.

Why can't classes, especially lecture classes, be moved to larger rooms that aren't being used to accommodate more students? The students don't care if the classroom isn't located in the "department" they just want to learn — after all, as the saying goes, we are here for an education.

When do those late freshman (the ones that were a credit short of being a sophomore in the fall, who register as freshmen) finally catch up and pay their dues like everyone else? Those people know how to work the system. But what if every freshman did that? What if they all caught on and figured out that they can get the classes they want by falling short a credit?

I hate to break the news, but that's why a lot of upperclassmen had late scheduling dates and couldn't get their classes. The freshmen are wising up, or better yet we could say they're working the system.

Back to the cheated upperclassman. How are we suppose to graduate when the course we need to take (only offered winter quarter) is full? Do you think I'm going to stick around another year to wait for it? HA! I, like most college students, don't have the time or money.

So, we beg, sniffle, pout, bat our eyelashes, brown-nose, and become down right mean to get our way. Oh, the professors are used to it now. They wear wash-and-wear suits, bring boxes of Kleenex, carry mace and keep several new pens by their desks, but I pity the student, because until something better can be worked out — we're stuck.

HERE WE SEE THE FAMILIAR PARANOID AN' POTENTIALLY SUICIDAL EXPRESSION WHICH OFTEN ACCOMPANIES REGISTRATION.

WHAT HE SEES ON THE MONITOR DIDN'T EXACTLY "MAKE HIS DAY!"

At the CWU Student Counseling Center each Wednesday, 7 - 8:30 p.m., beginning January 16, 1985 of this winter quarter a new service will be aimed at helping older students adjust to college life and the personal changes that come with starting on the road to a new career.

If you are a student 25 years and over, have returned within the past 2 years to finish your college education, or are just starting your college education, and feel that you need some assistance with issues of personal or career goals, this group could be for you! Please contact Catherine Armstead 963-2501, Larry Thompson, 925-4771, or the CWU Student Counseling Center at 963-1391

EDUCATION MAJORS

It is required that Teacher Education Majors planning to enroll for ED 300 (Pre-Autumn Experience), Option II Entry Phase or ED 442 (Student Teaching) during the 1985-86 academic year attend one of the following meetings scheduled for January 29, 30, 31 from 3-5 p.m. at the SUB Theatre. Applications and information will be disseminated at this time and not prior.

ABUSE: Prevention through awareness Protection through self-defense

By ELLEN HIATT
Staff Writer

One out of three women and one out of nine men are raped in their lifetime, according to Shirley Fischer, director of the Sexual Assault Program in Ellensburg, but there are ways to protect yourself, said Fischer.

Always lock your doors and walk in a self-confident, alert manner, she said. She also recommended not walking alone at night, and avoiding unlit areas.

"Be aware, not necessarily paranoid," she said.

Fischer stressed self-protection rather than self-defense in deterring a rapist.

"Taking karate lessons is not going to change you into an aggressive person if you aren't already," she said.

Al Teeples, chief of Campus Safety, said just a little knowledge of karate or similar defenses can be dangerous if the victim is not skilled enough to carry out the action effectively.

Both Fischer and Teeples said that a step toward rape prevention is to keep away from situations that would leave a potential victim open for attack.

"The use of alcohol or drugs can lead to situations that can get out of control," said Teeples.

Teeples said people should avoid being alone with others they distrust. He said 90 percent of reported rapes are acquaintance rapes.

The need for domination is what motivates many rapists, said Fischer.

"Our society has dictated that men are more powerful and women submissive," she said.

"If a woman kissed a man and he didn't want it, he would put her in her place," said Teeples. "But women feel they have to be tolerant of men when they are out of line.

"I think women should be more forceful than they are."

The acquaintance rapist is looking for a victim who is submissive and won't tell on him, he said.

According to Teeples there have been no rapes reported to the Campus Safety Department this year, "but that doesn't mean they aren't happening."

"I know they are. They just aren't getting reported," said Teeples.

According to Teeples, many victims don't report rape because they don't have any faith in the outcome, or they fear they will be further victimized by the judicial system.

"I can see a change coming in the judicial system," said Teeples. He said it is becoming more sympathetic women.

"Rape is no longer an ugly word like it was a few years ago," he said.

Reporting rape cases is a step towards prevention, said Teeples, adding the more it's reported, the less it will occur.

Even if the victim reports the rape but doesn't prosecute, the rapist has been stopped in most cases, said Teeples.

Some men, he said, are not aware they are committing rape the first time.

"'You have to beat a woman to be committing rape' is a common misconception," said Teeples.

After they commit their first rape, men know the difference between rape and seduction, he said.

Teeples said there isn't any way to prevent the "jump-out-of-the-bushes" and assault kind of rape.

He said Campus safety doesn't provide an escort service because it is more effective for them to educate than to provide an unrealistic environment on campus.

Beck hall provided an escort service Fall quarter 1983, but no longer extend that service.

Millions of violent crimes occur yearly. Many could be avoided if precautions such as self-defense training were taken.

Child abuse hurts everyone

By PERRI BIXLER
Staff Writer

When child abuse exists in a family every member of that family suffers. According to the Child Advocacy Council, which handles child abuse treatments in Kittitas County, society suffers also because abused children often grow up to abuse their own children, thus perpetrating a tragic cycle.

There are six recognized forms of child abuse: physical abuse, physical neglect, emotional abuse, emotional deprivation, verbal assault, and sexual abuse.

Child abuse and neglect is a growing problem both nationally and in the State of Washington.

According to Diane Aid, executive director of the Child Advocacy Council, Kittitas county is average in Washington State in child abuse cases reported, although the county is a little higher in reported sexual abuse.

The Child Advocacy Council pamphlet entitled "Child Abuse", states that parents who abuse their children wish they didn't, and experience intense anguish and guilt about their behavior.

Aid said often times the poor and uneducated believe child abuse only happens to them.

Aid explained that statistically this is true because social workers have greater contact with lower income families and also, people who are legally required to report abuse cases find it easier to report people out of their peer group.

Teachers, policemen, and doctors find it hard to report abuse committed by their middleclass friends and peers.

Aid said that adult survivors prove that abuse also occurs in upper and middleclass families.

The media reports the sensational abuse cases, the horrible torturing and sexual assaults, creating another myth, Aid said.

"The majority of child abuse takes the form of out-of-hand spanking, verbal and emotional neglect," said Aid.

"I don't want to downplay the extreme abuse cases," she said, "but the public should be aware that abuse can be low keyed."

Another myth is that step-parents are the main perpetrators of abuse.

"More abuse or neglect happens in single-parent households," said Aid.

Student parents don't seem to be a large group of abusers. In fact, Aid said the council encourages parents who have abused their children to enroll at Central.

Central Foundation receives land grant

By DON DOWIE
Staff Writer

Central's School of Business and Economics may soon be awarded over $100,000 towards its program of special accreditation, due to a land gift presented to the CWU Foundation by Leonard and Betty Thayer of Thayer Case Realty.

The money will be presented to the school of business upon its sale to a developer, said Larry Danton, dean of Business and Economics.

The CWU Foundation is a non-profit independent organization of individual donors. The foundation will sell the land and give two-thirds of the proceeds to the school of business, and one-third to other university departments.

Danton said the school of business hopes to be accredited by the Assembly of Colleges, Schools and Businesses by 1988-89.

Special accreditation will cost about one million dollars initially. The money will be used to hire professors, assistants, fund research projects and buy computer time. This will aid the university in meeting the Assembly's standards.

Out of the 1200 U.S. colleges and universities that offer Bachelor of Arts in Business degrees, only 240 are specially accredited.

Degrees acquired at specially accredited schools would enable students to pursue graduate work at prestigious universities, and enter the work force at major corporations, like Shell Oil, which only recruit employees from specially accredited degrees.

The donated land is located east of campus above Brook Court in the Vuecrest development area. The land has been cleared, but is undeveloped.

"The purpose of the foundation is to invest money, excluding state funds, for the maximum benefit to the university," said Robert Case, Foundation president.

Last year the foundation donated $300,000 in scholarships and other funds.

"The foundation is important because it can administrate funds without state approval," said Case. "The state has many restrictions, and the foundation as a separate entity can meet the needs of the university," he said.

Thayer said the land donation was a good way to help the university.

"I'm retiring, and I don't want to develop the land," Thayer said. "This is an opportunity to make a donation."

The total revenue from the land will probably exceed $130,000 depending on market price.

Violence is not the key to self-defense

By JEAN EDGE
Staff Writer

In what seems to be an increasingly violent society, statistics show that violence on campuses is especially high, triggering an increased interest in self-defense.

According to Al Teeples, Chief of Campus Safety, self-defense is using whatever is necessary to get out of a dangerous situation, short of violence.

"Violence begets violence," Teeples said. "If you are being attacked and you take an aggressive stand, you are telling your attacker that you are going to hurt him. His reaction will be to hurt you first," he said.

Teeples said he feels karate is good as long as the individual pursues it as a sport rather than for the sole purpose of self-defense.

"If you are studying karate as a sport, the stances and moves become automatic, but it takes years of practice and discipline to become that good," he said. "But if you are studying karate or any of the martial arts as a method of self-defense, you're only going to get into trouble," Teeples said.

"What it comes down to is that if you draw your fingers back as though to poke out his eyes, even if you don't carry the threat through, he's going to hurt you," Teeples said.

Self-defense classes teach you to go for the eyes, throat and groin area," he said. "Your main purpose becomes to either kill or seriously disable your attacker. Most people, however, especially women, can't bring themselves to seriously injure another human being, even if he is attacking them," said Teeples.

Studies show that although women outperform men in martial arts by being more agile and by kicking higher, few women are capable of bringing themselves to seriously hurt their opponent, Teeples said.

"Women are taught from birth to be passive; to be ladylike while men are taught to be aggressive," Teeples said. "Very few women can bring themselves to gouge out someone's eye with their keys or to shove a comb through another person's throat," he said.

According to Teeples, it is better to not fight your attacker than to fight him and injure him slightly.

"If you're going to fight your attacker, seriously injure him or kill him because otherwise he's going to put you in the hospital," he said.

Many women feel the best defense is to kick their attacker in the groin, but Police Sgt. Joe Slaughter believes the groin is the worst area possible to aim for.

"The groin area is relatively well protected by the legs," said Slaughter. "It is also one of the smallest areas on the body. Chances are very good that a person aiming for the groin area, especially if that person is very scared, will end up kicking the thigh or lower abdomen and making the attacker angry," he said.

"Nowadays, men are constantly on their guard against a kick or a knee to the groin," Teeples said. "An attacker will be watching for something like that to happen."

"Even if someone does manage to deliver a kick to the proper area, it doesn't stop them immediately," Teeples said.

"It takes 30 seconds to a minute before cramps set in, and the attacker knows this," he said. "He also knows when those cramps start, he won't be able to move, so most guys try to get in at least one good swing before he goes down. Unless you can move really fast, you're in trouble," said Teeples.

Teeples said he feels the best defense a person can use is to take precautionary measures to insure their safety.

"Violence begets violence. If you are being attacked and you take an aggressive stand, you are telling your attacker that you are going to hurt him. His reaction will be to hurt you first."

— Al Teeples,
Chief of Campus Safety

"Always be aware of the situation," he said. "You should not walk alone at night, but if you have to, keep your keys handy and walk in well-lighted areas. Walk quickly with a purpose, occasionally glancing at your watch as though you have to be somewhere by a certain time," Teeples said.

Teeples suggests not screaming for help if you are being attacked, but throwing something through a window instead.

"Students here on campus are used to hearing screams, especially on Friday and Saturday nights, and they don't respond to them," Teeples said. "Throwing something through a window would attract attention."

According to Teeples if you are being attacked, you should try to think your way out of the situation.

"If someone is trying to rape you, tell him you have AIDS, herpes, you're menstruating — anything," said Teeples.

"Gross him out. Stick your finger down your throat and throw up on him," he said.

"If you're being robbed, give them your money," he said. "You can always get more money. If somebody is trying to pick a fight with you — leave," he said.

"I'm not saying you should be passive," Teeples said. "Nobody has the right to push you around. I'm saying that you shouldn't take unnecessary risks," he said.

"We would rather interview you about what happened than try to figure out what happened to you," Teeples said.

According to Teeples, the most important thing to do if you are attacked in any way is to report it.

"If you can't talk your way out of the situation, don't be passive about being victimized," he said. "Study his face, dress, mannerisms, everything so you can give us a good description of him. Then report it," he said.

Even if you couldn't stop him from attacking or robbing you, you might be able to stop him from doing the same thing to someone else."

Abuse

According to Aid, parents who go on to college feel better about themselves as they become involved in educational and social activities. Job opportunities may also improve.

While the true extent of child abuse and neglect is not completely known, the National Center on Child Abuse and Neglect estimates that approximately one million children are mistreated by their parents or guardians each year.

According to "Child Abuse", historically the abused child was taken out of the home.

The council explained that this action is now believed to be as potentially harmful to the child's well-being as the abuse. Therefore, alternative methods are now provided.

Professionals who often come in contact with young children and parents can be trained to recognize the symptoms of parents who are potential abusers.

Teenagers and young adults can receive training to become better parents, and abusing parents can be offered a treatment program.

Both family and friends can also be supportive to child and parent.

The consequences of child abuse and neglect may remain with the victim as an indelible pain throughout their lifetime. If child abuse is suspected, reports can be made to the State Department of Social and Health Services at 925-9834, and Crisis Line 925-4168.

Early detection and help for parents increases the chances of child abuse being controlled and prevented.

C.J. Nelsen/The Observer

Any one of these children could be victims of child abuse or neglect. Many forms of treatment are now available to the victim as well as the abuser.

A day in memory of a King

By DOUG WILLIAMS
Staff Writer

"Early mornin', April 4, shot rings out in the Memphis sky. Free at last, they have took your life, they could not take your pride."
— "Pride (In the name of love)"

U2

The rock group U2 echoes the end of the life of The Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., the most famous civil rights leader this country has ever seen. In honor of Dr. King's lifetime achievements, every Jan. 17 starting next year will be Martin Luther King Jr. Day, as passed by the United States Congress in 1983. King was assassinated on April 4, 1968 by James Earl Ray in Memphis, Tenn.

"There are a variety of reasons to have a Martin Luther King Jr. Day," said James Peterson, director of Central Washington University's Ethnic Studies Program.

"There's a lot of politicking in-involved in introducing a Martin Luther King Jr. Day. The politician pushing such a movement may achieve some popularity with certain people," he said.

"I think the main thing behind Martin Luther King's popularity is that throughout his life, he combated 'nobodiness.' Nobodiness is a scary thing, and he said to all of those people 'You are somebody!' If we can escape being nobody, then we can relate to Dr. King's message.

"There's a celebration of that 'brotherhood of the endangered,'" Peterson continued, "and we celebrate Martin Luther King Jr. and his concerns as a collective annual announcement: 'Let's be cautious - let's not violate ourselves.'"

King was born into a minister's family on Jan. 15, 1929 in Atlanta. At the age of six, his father changed his own name as well as his son's to Martin Luther King in tribute to the Protestant reformer Martin Luther who brought about great change in that faith during the 16th century.

King attended Morehouse College, an all-black school in Atlanta. He also studied at Crozier Theological Seminary in Chester, Penn., where he became the first black to be elected class president. He was awarded a fellowship to study at Boston College, and was co-pastor at his father's church, Ebenezer Baptist Church in Atlanta.

King's first major demonstration was the Montgomery Bus Boycott of 1955. It began quite by accident when Rosa Parks, a black seamstress, disobeyed a bus driver's order to give up her seat to a white customer. Parks was arrested and fined $14. A boycott of the entire Montgomery bus system ensued, and King suddenly found himself as one of the major leaders of the civil rights movement.

Perhaps the most famous of his protests was the voter registration march, when 25,000 people marched from Selma, Ala. to the capital city of Montgomery. Although designed to bring attention only to voter registration laws, the show of support generated by the march brought the civil rights movement to the forefront of United States politics.

At the time of his assassination, King was in the middle of preparing a "Poor People's Campaign," which was to have included a tent city to be erected either in Washington, D.C., or in Chicago, the site of the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

On Dec. 19, 1964, King received the Nobel Peace Prize, and became the third black to win the coveted award, and the youngest person ever chosen to win the annual prize. Part of his acceptance speech at the awards ceremony further exemplified his commitment to peace:

"I refuse to accept the idea that man is a mere flotsam and jetsam in the river of life which surrounds him. I refuse to accept the view that mankind is so tragically bound to the starless midnight of racism and war that the bright daybreak of peace and brotherhood can never become a reality."

CWU ROTC changes command

By SYMANTHA STEELMAN
Staff Writer

Three Central ROTC students were presented with Dean's Honors at the Army ROTC change of command and Academic Awards Presentation Jan. 10.

Bobbi Hansen, Pat Michaels and Joe Shenkel were recognized for their outstanding academic achievements Fall quarter.

Jimmy Applegate, Dean of the School of Professional Studies, presented an award to Hansen for her cumulative grade point average of 3.53, Shenkel for his 3.54 GPA, and Michaels for his 4.0 GPA.

Michaels said receiving the Army ROTC Deans Honors should help him out in applying for an ROTC Scholarship.

A two year ROTC scholarship was awarded to Travis Bernritter, a junior majoring in Public Relations. Bernritter was judged on his leadership abilities, general test scores, and performance in ROTC Basic Camp.

ROTC cadets Tim Neely, Brent Campbell, and Richard Walters were also awarded Deans Honors for outstanding GPA's Spring Quarter of last year.

How to Flirt ON MONDAY

.....if you want a date for Friday. Nothing attracts people to each other like certain subtle signals. YOU can learn what they are and how to use them...with CONFIDENCE to make someone feel you're special. Benefit as you enjoy reading of the first-hand experiences of others, like yourself, trying to attract someone they like. No, you don't have to be beautiful, wealthy, popular or unique in any waythese tested winning ways do work for everyone willing to try them.

We know how you feel about first encounters. Maybe you are afraid to approach someone -- scared you will be rejected, or worse yet, laughed at or put down. Perhaps you're missing your chance to meet someone that you find interesting because you don't know the right way to go about it. Worry no more.

"HOW TO FLIRT ON MONDAY" was written especially for you to overcome these fears and to give you new self-assurance. Discover how to make shyness work for you. Know why "acting out of character" is always the wrong thing to do. Learn how to use the "verbal handshake" technique plus many more subtle approach ideas you have yet to think of. Read how a mere glance, scent or smile can ignite a relationship and be sure that you're using them the right way. (You'll know you know how!) Chapters also uncover many sensitive areas no one ever tells you about but we tell it like it is... with humor and warmth. If ever you've wanted someone you like to "want to" know you then this book is a must! You won't put it down til it's finished.

Tent 'n Tube offers getaway for skiers

By NICK BEAUMONT
Staff Writer

For the coldest part of Winter quarter, the Tent 'n Tube in the SUB is inviting all Central skiers to take part in mid-week ski bus runs to Snoqualmie Pass for skiing at Ski Acres, Alpentel, or Snoqualmie Summit.

Transportation and/or lift tickets are part of the deal, making it easy for skiers to get some skiing in during the school week. Every Wednesday, from Jan. 23 to March 13, students can go skiing without the worry of getting to the slopes or getting back to campus.

The buses will leave at 3:15 p.m. from the Hertz parking lot, according to Jennifer Minnich, who will be doing some of the driving to and from the pass.

Minnich, Tent 'n Tube's outdoor programmer, said interest in Tent 'n Tube's offerings are rising as registration comes to an end. She said downhill skis and poles are too expensive for a small operation like Tent 'n

Tube to handle, but cross-country skis are available daily, for the weekend, or weekly, and innertubes are up for rental for those who want to go innertubing in Cle Elum, on the hills surrounding Ellensburg's water tower, or anywhere else.

A cross-country ski package is available, or the items are available individually for rental. Tent 'n Tube also has an outdoor resource center which has information on many areas in Washington. For the rental of any equipment, students will be asked to hand over money in advance and have three pieces of identification. Rentals are also available between quarters. Any damage, loss, or cleaning charge will be the responsibility of the renter, and insurance is available.

Jerry Findley, manager of Tent 'n Tube, said the ski bus program will be $15 for transportation and lift tickets or $5 for transportation only. Also, once at Snoqualmie, skiers can choose which area they like best and be bussed there, as the firm that owns all the areas is running a shuttle bus between areas.

Bits of state history make up Roslyn tav

By JOHN BRADLEY
Staff Writer

Bored with another weekend in Ellensburg? Want to try something completely different? Well, how about driving up to Roslyn to visit The Brick Tavern.

The Brick is the oldest operating saloon in the state of Washington. It was built in 1889 by Mayor Pete Giovanini and is made of 45,000 red bricks manufactured in the Roslyn community.

The enormous back bar, still in excellent condition, was purchased in Portland, Ore., after being shipped from England around the Cape Horn. It is more than 100 years old.

The longevity of the old wooden chairs and tables acquired shortly after the turn of the century, can be attributed to Sears & Roebuck.

"The Brick has a running spittoon the length of the back bar, and is the only one like it I've ever seen," said Jim Luster, the proprietor.

He encourages students and tourists to come and visit Roslyn and The Brick.

"The town's economy is changing and becoming more dependent on tourism as the timber industry dies out."

Part of the attraction for tourists stems from the atmosphere and furnishings. The Brick is not your everyday modern bar, but is more like a turn of the century saloon. Just sitting in this tavern, one can get a feeling for how wild the early days must have been in Washington's state history. The Brick has many furnishings of early Americana on display for everyone to see. A nickel-plated cash register will soon be on display.

There are also antique taps from wooden beer barrels adorning the walls. In the basement there are original jail cells which were used for overflow when the city jail was too crowded. These jail cells were recently used for a set when a major motion picture, "The Runner Stumbles," was filmed in Roslyn.

For entertainment, there is local talent playing every night with Monday evening set aside for jazz, which usually draws a big crowd. And best of all, The Brick is only a half hour drive from Ellensburg.

Series presents domestic, foreign films

By JIM MASSEY
Scene Editor

The Classic Film Series continues this quarter, presenting films from all over the world, with showings on Sunday and Wednesday evenings.

"Chinatown," director Roman Polanski's 1974 detective film, plays Sunday night at 7 p.m. in McConnell Auditorium.

"Chinatown," set in 1930s Los Angeles, is much like the film noir private eye films of the '30s and '40s, but Polanski has given a frightening, slightly perverse tone to the screenplay by Robert Towne. J.J. Gittes is a private detective who gets mixed up in a tangled plot involving murder, blackmail, corruption and incest. A beautiful woman with a mysterious past, a ruthless millionaire and irrigation water rights are all a part of his investigation.

Polanski and Towne have taken the old genre and injected it with a modern sensibility. The costumes and sets are of a time long past, but the characters and violence are frighteningly realistic.

When Gittes gets his nose sliced up by a sadistic punk (played, incidentally, by Polanski), the bandage and grisly wound remain throughout the film, a constant reminder of the effects of violence. It's as if they wanted to say to the audience, "Look, the movies aren't just fun and games anymore."

Jack Nicholson plays Gittes as a competent, cocky fellow, a bit of a pain, but ultimately likable. He makes sure not to be too much of a hero, not to be a superhuman Sam Spade or Phillip Marlowe. He is vulnerable and open to painful attack.

Faye Dunaway is the mysterious Mrs. Mulwray. In Dunaway's subtle expressions it is evident that Mrs. Mulwray has suffered and is capable of causing suffering.

John Huston, who directed the definitive film noir private eye film "The Maltese Falcon," is on hand as the aged millionaire who seems to be the cause of many problems.

"Chinatown" is an exercise in atmosphere, combining excellent performances, an intelligent script and a slightly twisted tone.

"Rocco and His Brothers," Italian Luchino Visconti's 1960 study of a turbulent family, plays Wednesday night at 7 in McConnell Auditorium.

"Rocco and His Brothers" tells the story of the clash of differing value systems when a southern Italian family migrates to Milan in industrial northern Italy. The traditional southern peasant family and its archaic code of honor and family loyalty contrasts the more individualistic morality reflecting industrial society.

The Pardini clan arrives in Milan, the mother and four of her sons, and they meet her eldest son, already established in the city. Each family member then tries to make his own way in their new surroundings.

Each of the sons represents a possible response to the immigrant problems. The film follows them through their endeavors, their love affairs, and their struggles between themselves.

Visconti links the larger historical problems of cultural and economic change, Italy's rapid postwar industrialization, to the melodramatic tale of a family tragedy.

"Rocco and His Brothers" has a fine European cast including Alain Delon and Claudia Cardinale.

Single admission for each film is $1.50. Tickets are available at Jerrol's, Four Winds and Ace Records in Ellensburg, and at the English Department office in the Language and Literature building.

Women have chance for fame

By DOUG WILLIAMS
Staff Writer

Single women have a chance to win many prizes and national recognition in the All-American Music Pageant in April.

The national pageant with TV hostess Cheryl Prewitt, Miss America 1980, will be telecast live via satellite on April 15, 1985. Featured will be one representative from each of the 50 states being judged by professionals in the music and entertainment industries.

"The purpose of this unique pageant is to discover America's most talented young female singers and instrumentalists, giving them the opportunity to win a year of intense career development with an agent, publicist, coach, and recording and television contracts," said Elise Neal Davis, national contestant coordinator.

Along with these prizes, Jantzen Company, one of the many pageant sponsors, will be awarding state and national winners wardrobe packages.

For any single woman between the ages of 18 and 28 to have the chance to win the national competition, she must enter her state pageant by contacting Davis or Nancy Shapiro, state director, at 1-800-523-1954. The deadline for entering is Feb. 1, 1985.

LES offers more

By SHARON CHASE
Staff Writer

Take a hike! Poke around antique or hobby and music stores. Hunt, fish or go skiing to make the most of your leisure time. If you are into weights, aerobics, a concert or special event on campus, or want to know where a meal can be bought for $5 or less, then LES (Leisure Exploration Services) has a deal for you.

LES is four years old and is located in SUB 111. LES is the brainchild of faculty and students in the Leisure Services program at Central. It was created to give the students and the surrounding community an awareness of the available resources in Kittitas Valley. The listing is updated quarterly and runs all year.

According to Bruce Parker, spokesman for the program, LES is a computerized system containing "465 different agencies and businesses on file within the valley...all catalogued according to subject. The service is completely free to the public and the students of CWU."

When filled out, an easy-to-answer questionnaire is processed by computer and the results are picked up or mailed to the interested individual.

"The idea is to form an easily accessible listing, general or specific, to meet the individual's special needs and interests for leisure time activities," Parker said.

The areas of specialization on the questionnaire are clubs/organizations on and off campus, religion, outdoor and indoor recreation on campus, outdoor and indoor recreation off campus, food and beverage, self-improvement, cultural and performance activities.

The opportunities on file are all within a 50-mile radius of Ellensburg. The amount of money to be spent on the activity may range from $5 to $50. Broken down by age groups from age five to senior citizen, the listing allows for family participation. The final question on the list asks what day(s) of the week the activity would be most desirable, allowing the individual to schedule those leisure time activities.

The questionnaire is available in the University Recreation Office in SUB 111. LES tells us a place to go, something to do, a way to get away.

Students escape to classes

By KARLA MILLER
Staff Writer

Central students can "escape" through a new program sponsored by University Recreation, according to Jerry Findley, director of recreation.

Escape is a series of non-accredited classes offered Winter quarter allowing students to try something different, Findley said.

"This will give students exposure to other activities than the ones they are used to," Findley said.

This winter, classes are offered in winter survival camping, downhill skiing, cross country skiing, telemark (a style of cross-country skiing), snowshoe hiking, bicycle repair, and a three day seminar on health and fitness.

This program, offered in cooperation with continuing education, is patterned off something Findley saw at Southern Oregon State College, he said. People at University Recreation thought it would be a good idea and they decided to try it.

"This quarter is the kick-off," Findley said. University Recreation hopes to offer the Escape program every quarter except summer. These classes will be geared toward the student and are taught on an informal basis by faculty and/or students.

LGAs: a vital part of Central

By SHARON CHASE
Staff Writer

Your time is 7:15 a.m. the first day of registration at Central Washington University. In addition, you receive free room and board in one of 18 residence halls. You are an LGA (living group advisor), one of 71 undergraduate students at Central.

Carl Keeler, director of residence living, enthusiastically promotes the undergraduate living group advisory system at Central, recalling his college residence living experience as more structured and rigid. The LGA program is a live-in team of para-professional staff who act as facilitators to the group living/learning experience.

"Possibly one of the nicest benefits is early registration," Keeler said. Central was one of the first universities to initiate a program using the undergraduate student for residence hall staff. Keeler believes in the cooperative atmosphere the peer advisory system promotes, and feels the students and LGAs benefit from the exchanges that occur.

Screening for LGAs takes place Winter quarter, training for applicants and alternates is during spring, and fall quarter is the follow-up workshop.

A living group advisor should possess, "...basic skills in individual and group counseling and advising, and have necessary time to devote to their responsibilities," according to the description form available at the Office of Residence Living.

Additional criteria used in the selection process are that the LGA applicant have at least a 2.25 gpa and possess leadership experience ability and self-awareness.

Some conditions and standards for LGA applicants are to agree not to take more than 17 credits per quarter; and to arrive early (approximately two weeks prior to the opening of the halls) for orientation and training workshops (in-service training workshops are scheduled during the regular school year).

The most often asked question about the living group advisor selection is about the interviews.

"The best advice I can give is to be yourself, relax and have fun with it," said Katie Rogers, an LGA for North Hall.

Rogers, a junior at Central, is a communications major working her first year as an LGA. Selected as an alternate the first year she applied, Katie persevered and was selected.

"Being an LGA is a great job! There are some material benefits, but for me it's the personal growth, a chance to meet new friends and gain self-knowledge. You can only understand the job of LGA after you've experienced it — after you've actually done the job," Rogers said.

Rogers added that no two LGA responsibilities are exactly alike...each one is unique to his or her own hall. An LGA works in the hall as a fellow student or friend, not someone "in charge." She calls the LGA experience "invaluable," enjoys her student friends and the interaction and good relationships with the residence hall staff.

Appointments to the living group advisor staff are normally made for one year. However, the possibility exists for a second year. An information packet and complete listing of the functions performed by an LGA may be obtained from the Office of Residential Living in the Health and Counseling Center. The packet contains the following information: an outline of the selection process, important dates, conditions and standards for employment, criteria for selection and an application form.

Applications deadline is tomorrow for the 1985-86 academic year.

Lipsync comes to McConnell

By PERRI BIXLER
Staff Writer

Lipsync '85 has finally arrived. Lipsync performers will get the opportunity to mimic favorite musical groups and the chance at some money prizes.

The show is sponsored by the University Store. Dave MacAuley, manager, said he wants at least 12 groups that are dedicated to putting on a good performance.

"This is the main purpose of auditions," he said. "It also helps create cohesiveness to the show by scheduling solo acts after groups which take longer to set up and dismantle."

The last chance to audition for this year's show will be tomorrow at 4 p.m. in McConnell Auditorium.

Each group should pre-register at the University Store.

Groups should tape their music and turn it in at tomorrow's audition. MacAuley said tapes will be returned by Jan. 21.

The only requirement is that performers be full time CWU students.

Gift certificates, redeemable at the University Store, will be given out as awards.

The show will be Jan. 25 at 7 p.m. in McConnell Auditorium. Tickets go on sale Jan. 21 for $1 in the University Store.

EVOLUTION IS GOOD!

Creationism isn't ... especially when it hampers the basic gift God gave us in our skulls: the ability to ask questions, to pursue research, to plan. Sin is not a "secular humanist"; it is the idolatry of self or system. The best part about theories of growth and hypotheses about our origin is that they help us discover the height, breadth, length, and even depth of the God of all time.

Wildcats travel to Simon Fraser, Western

By LOREN WOLGEMUTH
Staff Writer

Central's women's basketball team continues District 1 play this weekend with two big district games. The 'Cats take their 6-3 district record on the road to Simon Fraser tomorrow and to Western Washington on Saturday.

The Lady 'Cats lost to Simon Fraser in their season opener, 55-54, and defeated Western, 61-52, in the first meeting of the two schools January 5.

Toni Larimer, junior guard from Ellensburg, led all scorers against Western with 15 points on 6-of-10 field goal shooting and three for five in foul shots. Larimer also added six assists and four steals.

Cheryl Homestead, a junior transfer from Highline Community College, added eleven points and six rebounds. Lisa Carlson contributed seven rebounds, as the 'Cats outrebounded Western, 54-35.

Boasting the districts' longest winning streak at four games, the Wildcats have beaten Whitman twice this season, 83-50 and 87-58, their highest scoring output of the young season.

Marcia Byrd captured game highs of 13 points and eight rebounds in the first meeting and 15 points in the second contest. Jennifer Phelps added 12 points and six rebounds in the second game.

The 'Cats lost to Seattle University 75-58 in the fourth game of the season, one of three losses so far. Larimer led all scorers with 14 points and added six rebounds. Carlson contributed 10 points and a game-high nine rebounds in the losing effort.

Central avenged the loss with a 70-68 victory two games later against Seattle University. Homestead led both teams with 14 points and five rebounds. Larimer added 12 points.

Central won four straight games before losing to Western Montana in a tournament held over the winter break. The 'Cats posted a 2-1 mark in the tournament.

Larimer scored a season high 18 points in a 78-64 win over Carroll College of Montana. She also added nine rebounds. JoAnn Holden added eight points and 10 rebounds. Homestead also scored 12 points in the victory.

Against Montana Tech, an 84-68 win, Homestead scored a season high 18 points and Carlson added 14 points and seven rebounds, a game high. Phelps added 12 points.

The 'Cats lost their third game of the season against Western Montana, 79-69. Julie Fees, a sophomore center, led both teams with 14 points and added eight rebounds. Carlson scored 11 points and a season-high 11 rebounds in the losing effort. Homestead added 12 points.

Central has also defeated the University of Puget Sound and last place Pacific Lutheran University. The 'Cats beat UPS 66-54 and PLU 63-35, posting their best defensive effort of the season.

Byrd led all scorers with 13 points and added six rebounds against UPS. Homestead added 12 points. Carlson led all players with eight rebounds and also scored eight points. Nita Wing, senior guard from Benton City also scored 12 points.

Against PLU, the 'Cats held the Lutes to 35 points on 10-of-32 field goals. The Lutes also committed 45 turnovers in the contest.

Byrd once again led all scorers with 11 points and also grabbed a game high six rebounds. Homestead added nine points and Carlson contributed seven points and five rebounds.

In a district game against St. Martins, the women prevailed 78-66. Phelps scored a game high 15 points and was one of five players with five rebounds.

Women lose big [103-69] to Gonzaga University

By JOHN MERRILL
Sports Editor

Tammy Tibbles and Maria Stack combined for 53 points Tuesday night as visiting Gonzaga University ran away from Central, 103-69, in women's basketball action.

Tibbles, a freshman, scored 32 points — 22 in the first half — on 14-of-28 shooting, pulled down seven rebounds, and handed out six assists to lead the way for the Bulldogs. Teammate Stack, the district's leader in scoring (24 points a game) and assists (six per game), added 21 points and seven-assists.

Loretta O'Brien contributed 14 points and 11 rebounds for Gonzaga.

For Central, junior Lisa Carlson led the way with 12 points, while sophomore Julie Fees added 11. Jennifer Phelps pulled down a team-high seven boards, but the Wildcats were outrebounded 51-38.

The game remained relatively close until the 3:52 mark of the first half, when Gonzaga ran off 13 of the next 17 points, including seven in a row.

The Bulldogs opened the second half with a 15-9 run to put the game out of reach.

Homestead had 14 points and five rebounds. Wing added 10 points and game-highs of nine assists and four steals. Holden also scored 10 points.

The 'Cats also defeated Seattle Pacific University by a 72-70 score last Saturday. Homestead led all scorers with 11 points and also had a game-high 11 rebounds. Wing added six points, seven assists and four steals. Larimer also scored 10 points.

To date, the 'Cats are led in scoring by Homestead, who has a 10.9 ppg average. Carlson is the leading rebounder with 75 and Wing has 68 assists and 65 steals. As a team, they are averaging 71 points per game, third best in District 1 action.

The women have 11 remaining District 1 games and will be looking to improve on their current 6-3 district mark and 10-4 season record.

The women's junior varsity basketball team, 3-2 on the season, has announced that it will participate in the Selah Parks women's league through March.

Central began competition with a 41-21 thrashing of Jackson's Tav last Sunday, and will resume play Sunday at 2:15 p.m. against Bill's Used Cars.

Tim Patrick/The Observer

Senior Kathy Blauman is fouled on the way to the basket during Central's 103-69 loss to Gonzaga Tuesday.

The big difference was shooting, where Gonzaga hit on 56.4 percent of its shots (44-of-78) and Central just 36.4 percent (24-of-66).

Cheryl Homestead scored 18 points in the Wildcat's win over Montana Tech.

Toni Larimer tallied 18 points in a Central victory at Carroll College.

Women's JV to play in parks league

In Sunday's win, Central was led by the 12 points of Patti Pendergast (leading the team with a 16.4 average) and 12 rebounds of Kristelle Arthur. The 'Cats outscored Jackson's Tav 20-6 to open the second half. Pendergast, a freshman from Bremerton, scored 10 of her 12 points in that half.

It was Pendergast again leading the way last Friday as the Wildcats, trailing by one a halftime, came back to nip Fort Steilacoom Community College, 62-61. Pendergast scored 21 points, but game-high honors went to Fort Steilacoom's Tina Goter, who had 24. Rachelle Arthur had 14 points and Deanna Sanders 11 for Central, while Kristelle Arthur led the way with 11 rebounds.

Wildcats enjoy fine quarter

By Dennis Anderson
Staff Writer

Coming off a strong fall quarter, coach Bob Gregson and the Central swim team are looking to Indianapolis, Ind., the sight of this year's NAIA national championship to be held February 27-March 2.

The Wildcats enjoyed one of their best Fall quarters ever, qualifying more swimmers for the national meet than in previous years, according to Gregson.

"In the past, we didn't have more than a couple of swimmers qualified going into Winter quarter competition," Gregson said.

Just before Christmas break, Central participated in the Pacific Lutheran University and Husky Invitationals, the latter at the University of Washington.

Even though the 'Cats split up the men's team to participate in both meets, Central still managed to capture first place by both the men and women at PLU.

"The PLU meet gave us a good idea of just where we are in terms of all-around team strength going into Winter quarter," Gregson said.

National qualifiers at the PLU Invitational include Peter Braden in the 400-meter individual medley with a time of 4:23.65; Rob Phelan in the 1650-meter freestyle with a clocking of 17:10.13; and Damon Stewart with a strong finish in the 200-meter backstroke to make his first national qualifying time at Central. All swims were good enough to win the event.

At the same time, nine men participated in the Husky Invitational at Hec Edmundson

Swimming

Next meet: Tomorrow at PLU.

Pavilion. Among the national qualifiers were John Lindquist and David Wright in the 400-meter individual medley with times of 4:19.08 and 4:23.06 respectively; Tom Harn in the 50-meter (21.90), 100-meter (47.2), and 200-meter (1:45.25) freestyles; Walt Flury in the 100-meter butterfly with a 53.74; John Bryant, who has already qualified in the 100-meter breast, repeated in the 200-meter with a time of 2:11.34; and John Dieckman in the 100-meter free with a 48.4.

The 400-meter medley relay team, consisting of Wright, Bryant, Flury and Harn clocked in at 3:38.14 for eighth place. The 400-meter free relay team, which included Lindquist, Dieckman, Harn and Flury, improved their time by nearly a second with a 3:12.4.

With recent additions of transfer student

Stan Vela from Spokane, via the University of Washington, and Jeff Hillis from Kailua, Hawaii, the Wildcats should prove to be very strong for national competition.

"Stan is of previous standout swimmer John Sayre claibre, and has the potential to win a couple of events and add a strong leg to the relays at nationals," Gregson said.

Hillis, a freshman, should prove strong in both the 100 and 200 breaststroke.

Although the women's record is 1-3 in Fall quarter duel meet competition, Gregson said, "They came on strong to win the PLU invitational and we got a lot of national qualifying times."

Because the women swam against NCAA teams in the fall, Gregson said, "The record is not too bad. We swam against teams like Montana and Idaho who are allowed to give scholarships to their swimmers."

"We have a chance to win a lot of the meets this quarter and come out with a winning record. Most of the meets scheduled are against NAIA teams," he added.

The women, who have recently added eligible transfer Christy Shake, from the UW, should add depth to the women's chances of repeating a top five national finish of last year.

Shake, who was the only woman from the Central team to participate in the Husky Invitational because of eligibility rules, made national qualifying times in both the 50-meter free (25.76) and the 100-meter free (55.93).

Recent qualifiers at the PLU Invitational include Debbie Gray in the 100-meter breaststroke (1:11.01) and the 200-meter breast (2:34.96), both times won the event. Amy Carroll clocked 56.31 in the 100-meter freestyle for first place and Kathy Lang placed fourth with 56.52. Lang also placed second in the 200-meter and fourth in the 50-meter freestyles.

In addition, Tani Thorstenson in the 500-meter freestyle and Gail Foster in the 100 and 200-meter backstroke made national qualifying times. Thorstenson finished second and Foster third in both events.

Central also won the 800-meter freestyle and 400-meter medley relays. The freestyle team consisted of Thorstenson, Lang, Mary Malagrini and Laura Hill. The medley team included Foster, Gray Thorstenson and Lang.

In the recent edition of Swimming World Magazine, the men's team was described as having good possibilities of returning a national crown, while the women's team has a good chance of moving into the top four.

In the men's area, Central's biggest competition will be from Drury College of Missouri and Denver College which both enjoyed strong recruiting years.

The women's main concern will be from the two Wisconsin schools, Wisconsin-Green Bay and Wisconsin-Eau Claire.

Central will travel this weekend for duel meets against PLU on tomorrow. The following day they will travel to Oregon for a tri-meet against Lewis and Clark State and Willamette University. Both PLU and Willamette placed in the top ten nationally in 1984 and should be good competitive meets.

'Cats fall short; Hanks first team

By MATT MASSEY
Staff Writer

Although Central's varsity football team was ousted, 44-6, by Central Arkansas in the NAIA Division 1 semifinals, the Wildcats had a great deal of positive come from the 1984 season.

The shock of the Dec. 8 season-ending loss is still in the minds of those associated with CWU, but the accomplishments still stand out clearly.

The CWU gridders' 11-2 overall mark and 8-0 Evergreen Conference record under Coach Tom Parry, marks the best season since the 'Cats posted 9-1 and 6-0 standards in 1972. The squad captured its 20th conference title in the 76-year history of football at the university.

Central, until this season, has also never notched more than ten wins in one season.

And to top that off, in that memorable season, CWU's football squad forged into the playoffs for the very first time in school history.

The 'Cats proceeded to eliminate the top-ranked NAIA team at the time, in East Central Oklahoma, 22-20, in the opening round of post-season play. The first playoff victory for CWU.

But then came defeat on Dec. 8, to squelch the Wildcats' championship dreams.

Second Team

Honorable Mention

Ed Watson, running back; Craig Warmenhoven, placekicker; Mark St. Louise, off. tackle; and Charlie Kruger, def. back Looking past the defeat, one would find further merit to 1984 CWU football. Seven team members were placed on the NAIA All-American squad.

Senior linebacker Maurice Hanks heads the all-star list as a first-team All-American selection. Hanks' honor was the first of its kind in two years, while CWU has never had more than two players on the three NAIA All-America teams.

Senior wide receiver Kyle Fowler, who set a school record for most career TD catches with 17, was named to second team, along with senior defensive tackle Simeon Fields.

Tabbed as honorable mention caliber were senior running back Ed Watson, who is only the third CWU back to eclipse the 1,000-yard rushing mark; sophomore placekicker Craig Warmenhoven, who rewrote the field-goal kicking section of the Central record book; senior offensive tackle Mark St. Louise, and senior defensive back Charlie Kruger.

With the reputation Central is being associated with, the Wildcats could become even better next season. But it will be tough, regardless, as the 'Cats lose 24 seniors via eligibility or graduation. CWU listed 88 players on its football roster this season.

Whether the 'Cats come back strong or not next season, only time will tell.

This past season has been monumental, and one loss can't ruin the heights CWU football success has reached. Nonetheless, 1984 was a banner year for Central on the gridiron.

Intramurals serious business at CWU

Intramural sports are becoming more and more popular at colleges across the country. For some, it is a time for having fun, exercising, meeting new people, and being with friends.

For others, it is the challenge and competition left behind when graduating from high school athletics. Such is the case at Central, where intramurals is serious business. Horn's All-Stars, for example, won the state 6-foot-and-under title and have not lost a game in four years of participation.

Intramurals

"It's unbelievable how bad some teams want to beat us," said All-Stars player-coach Mike Schellhorn, who added that the competition is getting better each year.

Besides basketball, Central's intramural program offers volleyball and, for the first time, pickleball. Over 1,000 students signed up for Winter quarter intramural sports.

Men moving up through change

By MATT MASSEY
Staff Writer

Changes.

Central's varsity men's basketball team is still adjusting to many changes as it approaches the midway point of the 1984-85 campaign.

"We're coming along and getting all our players out there together has been a big factor for us," said Central Wildcat head coach Dean Nicholson. "We still have got a ways to go — believe me. But I think we are showing the potential we have."

The 'Cats started the season with three losses, but have been on the rebound since. And Nicholson feels his new compilation of players can carry the crew into one of the top four playoff spots from the NAIA District 1's ten teams. CWU is now 3-1 in the district.

Those changes are now taking effect.

Central has won four straight games, and is over the .500 mark for the first time this season.

The Wildcats, who are currently 7-6 overall heading into tomorrow's contest at Simon Fraser University have made lineup alterations since the return of top players, seniors Darrell Tanner and Jon Jordon and junior Rodnie Taylor.

All three were scholastically ineligible, with Tanner making his debut in a CWU uniform on Dec. 15, with Taylor coming back Dec. 17. Jordon was eligible following his registration for Winter quarter, and saw action last Saturday in the 'Cats 107-97 win over host Seattle Pacific University.

"Tanner has played very well so far," remarked Nicholson of his starter, and ex-University of Washington star. "Taylor had a very good game against St. Martin's (15 points and 14 rebounds), but has been a little more inconsistent.

"Jordon is just getting going. Jon can help us down the road, but he's got to work in there."

Tanner's impact on the club has been felt the strongest. The lanky, 6-foot-7 forward has taken over as the team's scoring leader, averaging 16.3 points and also is tops in rebounding with eight an outing. Tanner also leads the squad in field goal percentage, with a 54 percent clip.

Taylor averages 8.3 points and 6.7 caroms an evening.

Tanner was immediately inserted to first team when he became eligible, while Taylor may work into a starting position soon, and Jordon will likely come off the bench.

The starting lineup has been altered somewhat since the early part of the season. Initially, Nicholson went with all seniors; Gordon Dixon and Roger Boesel at guards, Keith Bragg and Al Shannon at forwards, and Reggie Wright at center.

Recently, with Wright out for another two weeks or more because of the broken ring finger on his left hand, the regulars have been senior Andy Affholter and Boesel at guards, Tanner and Bragg at forward positions, Facts: CWU has lost two of the last three games in Bellingham. Central leads the all-time series, 111-59.

Since Tanner's been playing, the Wildcats have won five games and lost two. He has registered season team-high's of 21 points and 15 rebounds in Central's Dec. 29, 89-70 victory over the University of California at Davis.

"Darrell's an outstanding player. He had a rough start," assessed Nicholson. "He had a couple or three games where he had a lot of turnovers and had trouble getting going. But he's put together probably four good games in a row now and I think he will play to that level consistently."

Teammate vanderSchaaf has also had a 21-point outing this season.

The injured Wright is second on the club in scoring and rebounding behind Tanner, with a 10.2 point average and seven rebounds per game.

Also on the upswing is backcourt man, Boesel, a 6-foot-2 senior. Boesel is averaging 11.2 points and 5.7 boards in the past six contests, including 19 points and seven rebounds in Saturday's triumph at Seattle Pacific.

Boesel now is fourth in scoring at a 9.4 clip, behind vanderSchaaf, (9.5 points and 6.5 rebounds).

"Boesel's really been playing well," Nicholson told. "Rog is a tough kid. He's been going in and getting some rebounds. He has been playing excellent all-around basketball."

After playing at Seattle Pacific, the Wildcats take to the road this weekend for back-to-back District 1 night games at Simon Fraser (3-11 overall and 1-2 in district) tomorrow and Western Washington University (4-9 and 2-3 at presstime) Saturday.

"They are both under .500 teams," said Nicholson, "but that has been a tough road trip in the past. We are going to have to do a good job both nights up there."

"We are going to give a good account of ourselves from here on out," Nicholson said of his squad's quest for an NAIA post-season berth. "I don't know record-wise, but we're concerned with doing as well as we can in the district and finishing as high as we can there. And then doing the job in the playoffs."

JV Men win three of last five outings

The men's junior varsity basketball team, winner of three of its last five games, is on the road tomorrow for a 7:30 p.m. game at North Idaho.

The Wildcats lost their first five games by an average margin of 17 points, but since a one-point win was scored over the Pacific Lutheran University JVs last month they have raised their record to 3-7.

Central's most recent win was a 63-61 victory over Columbia Basin last Thursday, avenging a 20-point loss earlier in the season. The 'Cats opened up an 11-point lead and kept it that way until the five-minute mark, when Columbia Basin outscored CWU 10-3 to trim the lead to two at 61-59. Israel Dorsey's two free throws with 24 seconds left made a last second shot by CBC's Kelly Johnson obsolete and preserved the win for Central.

Dorsey finished with a team-high 17 points for Central, while B.J. Thurlby, the team's leading scorer this season with a 17-point average, finished with 10. Ron vanderSchaaf pulled down seven rebounds and Thurlby and Dorsey six each for the 'Cats.

On Jan. 7, the Wildcats erased an 18-point halftime deficit but lost to Green River, 74-69. Thurlby hit on 8-of-13 attempts from the field and finished with 18 points, but a 49-31 halftime lead was too much for Central to overcome.

For Green River, Dan Balmer led the way with 24 points and seven assists.

Dorsey had team highs of 18 points and eight rebounds two nights earlier as the 'Cats topped PLU's JVs, 65-60. It was the second meeting between the two teams, with Central also winning the first contest, 49-48. The 'Cats hit on 50 percent of their shots, as Thurlby added 12 points and six rebounds.

Central defeats No. 1 SFU

By KEVIN MARTY
Staff Writer

The CWU wrestling team is on its way to another fine season, defeating No. 1 nationally ranked Simon Fraser University last Saturday, and compiling a 4-0 season record.

Head coach Scott Ricardo feels the team is where he wants them to be at this point in the season.

"We're in as good of shape as most teams.

Wrestling

Next match: Tomorrow against PLU.

Last match: Central defeated No. 1 ranked Simon Fraser.

Record: 4-0

We have some tough matches coming up against North Idaho, Washington State and a Portland State tournament which draws some highly rated teams. We are providing exciting wrestling for the fans, and we're working very hard," Ricardo said.

Central travels to Pacific Lutheran University tomorrow, a team that fell to them earlier this season.

"It should be a tighter match this week, because PLU forfeited three matches in the 134 and 177 pound weight classes. We should beat them though," Ricardo said.

The Wildcats first regular season match at Highline Community College was cancelled, but the wrestlers squeaked by Eastern Washington University in their home opener last week, 19-18. Chris Mason (freshman from Spokane), Mark Peterson (sophomore, Tacoma), Eric Idler (sophomore, Burbank), Kris Morgan (junior, Castle Rock), Fred Gordon (senior, Elma), and Randy Penrose (junior, Moses Lake) each won matches in their respective weight divisions to lead the 'Cat victory.

The wrestlers then traveled to Moses

Mark Peterson outscored his opponents 58-7 in four wins this week to be named wrestler of the week.

Wrestling

Lake, but Big Bend Community College proved no contest as the Wildcats prevailed 36-2. Peterson, Gordon and Penrose along with Shawn Buechel (freshmen, Hoquim), and Keith Moore (freshman, Fairbanks), each won their matches.

Last weekend the Wildcats traveled to their third match of the season in Tacoma.

The wrestlers took first place in a duel meet at PLU, by defeating nationally ranked Simon Fraser, PLU and a forfeit from Big Bend. The 'Cats won 9-of-16 matches, defeating PLU and Simon Frazier 34-14 and 24-20, respectively.

Peterson won a major decision (9-0) and Robin MacAlpine (senior, Chugiak, Alaska) a technical fall (15-0) to lead the 'Cats over PLU. Peterson upped his record to 4-0 by winning on a technical fall (16-1) against Simon Fraser. Morgan also won on a technical fall (20-5) and was joined by the victories of Mason, Idler and Penrose.

Peterson was named wrestler of the week. His four wins included a decision, a major decision and two technical falls at the 126 pound weight class. He has compiled 58 points total, and allowed seven points to his opponents.

GREAT MOMENTS IN LIPSYNC #17

Kirk Funk and Susan Brantner

If you have ever been, then you know that our annual lipsync contest is a wild, anything can happen, rock 'n' roll show. We think that it's the blowout event of winter quarter. Where else can you find students, upright pillars of the community that they are, behaving like this? (See photo at left...) But the two great things about lipsync are:

- 1) It's right around the corner &
- 2) You can still PARTICIPATE!

Auditions are tomorrow, January 18th, so this is the VERY LAST CALL FOR ENTRIES! Get the hint? Sign up now at The University Store or be relegated to a seat in the frenzied crowd.
