Tuesday morning around 9:30 Washington State Department of Transportation workers feverishly clean up the rock wreckage on the westbound lanes of I-90. The debris slide onto the freeway in the early hours of Sunday morning, closing Snoqualmie Pass for more than 24 hours and forcing many motorists to find alternate routes over the mountains.

See full story page 2
TOP: Workers prepare a wall designed to catch rocks that may fall. The cable-mesh runs the entire length of the affected roadway, three-tenths of a mile long.

BOTTOM: The finishing touches are put onto the mesh from one end and a bulldozer works to clean up debris that has already fallen on the highway.

Financial aid could see cuts

by John Lord
Staff reporter

As college tuition across the nation has been steadily increasing, Congress is attempting to cut as much as $14.3 billion from student financial aid this week. This cut from financial aid is part of a $50 billion cut that the federal government is trying to save under the proposed budget reconciliation for 2006, and it looks like education will be getting it the worst.

"We college students need the money they are trying to take away from us," said sophomore EMT major Sean Kmiecik.

"I didn't know what to do because I've never been on Steven's before. So I called my dad freaking out. People were getting out of their cars on the side of the road and just having conversations because they weren't going anywhere."

The Senate is proposing a $14.3 billion cut.

Although the cuts may be reduced before the vote takes place, the $14.3 billion will most likely be the approved amount.

"I was by my self, with no cell phone reception," Richards said. "I was pissed."

The situation had not changed much for students who thought waiting a day would make a difference. Kyle Mangold, sophomore undecided, found that out first hand when he drove over Steven's Pass Monday afternoon.

"There was a snow plow in front of us and there was a line up of about 22 cars," Mangold said. "We were all going 25-30 mph over and down the pass. Going down the pass was scary.

The USSA has stated that the average student borrower already has $17,500 in debt.

"I don't even want to think about how we will be affected." Kmiecik said.

The USSA hosted national call-in days on Sep. 20 and Oct. 19. Over 10,000 people have called in and sent over 15,000 e-mails to show support against the financial aid cut.

"I was just really worried because there were a lot of truckers that kept overtaking into my lane. On top of the mountain it was oncoming and rating all at the same time. You had to have your windshield wipers going a million miles per hour."

Mark your calendars!

30th annual WARE FAIR

CWU's holiday arts, crafts, food and music festival

DEC. 1-3 in the SUB

Thursday: 10 a.m.-6 p.m.
Friday: 10 a.m.-7 p.m.
Saturday: 10 a.m.-3 p.m.
Panel attempts to pull back the Tortilla Curtain during presentation

Paula Pinomo opened the faculty panel that included Chris Schedler and Minerva Cables (right), by Allison White

“In America, we love what they despise,” Paula Pinomo, professor of English said. “We love liberty, but we didn’t know liberty until we freed the slaves.”

In the darkened auditorium of Hertz Hall last Thursday night, in the attendance of faculty, students and a few administrators, his comments tied to a dance of faculty, students and a few程序s.

“Pulling Back The Tortilla Curtain,” was hosted by Pinomo and included sociology professor Nelson Pichardo, bilingual elementary education professor Minerva Cables, education professor Donald Eaton-Brooks, assistant art professor Donna Suck and assistant English professor Christopher Schedler. Titles were given to each speaker’s portion of the forum, relating to their top programs.

Pichardo, the first speaker, entitled “The ‘Other’ Next Door: Social Borders and the Economy,” in which he looked at the impact of undocumented workers on the working economy.

“Why do we rail against illegals so strongly?” Pichardo said. “We look down on them, and it dehumanizes them.”

He said any figures and studies done about illegals are guesswork, because the workers are undocumented and do not want documentation because they run the risk of deportation. He said it costs $30 billion to provide services to illegals, and they contribute slightly more than they use. He also said migrant workers help the American economy through cheap labor.

“Our businesses want them there,” Pichardo said. “Exploitation of people goes hand-in-hand with vilification, but how education influences people.

Schedler, the next speaker offered a different perspective. His part, entitled “The ‘Other’ Next Door: Social Borders and Global Suburbs in The Tortilla Curtain,” chronicled how demographic and economic shifts have triggered a white flight to the suburbs.

“Ethnic enclaves have developed close to white suburbs,” Schedler said. “And social distinctions are made through restrictions and covenants.”

Schedler pointed out the irony of the situation, like in the novel, that though the Anglos are moving into enclaves, they still depend on the illegals to do cheap labor. He also said that concerns about security and violence have made shifts in social geography.

“Strangers are identified by cars they drive,” he said, capturing a scene from the novel where Delaney Mossbacher becomes paranoid about a car that trails him slowly in his neighborhood.

Following Schedler was Cables, who identified her presentation as “Possibilities for Multicultural Conversations in The Tortilla Curtain” and highlighted that reading is a singular event, and that no reading is the same as the last.

“The Other Next Door,” she started reading the novel. “I wondered why in heaven’s name the book was chosen for the entire campus.”

Cables’ presentation was not fully answered during the presentation, like many questions proposed during the evening.

Brooks’ presentation was titled “Becoming Human in the Eyes of Our Peers.” His locus lay in the question of how education will affect minorities and how education influences people. In reading the novel he realized that such such an “authentic voice is missing.” He shared a story of being in El Paso during college and he found himself, as an African-American, wondering about how ethnic groups viewed him.

“We felt the program started in October during nicer weather,” Rittereiser said. “Since we’re starting to see terrible temperatures on Nov. 14, Hope Source has the driving contract.

Two buses will be in operation to provide timely transportation in terrible temperatures on Nov. 14. Hope Source has the driving contract.

Central Transit to double bus service

by Patrick Lewis

Today students have to wait up to 30 minutes for a Central Transit bus, but after Nov. 14 that wait will be halved.

Central Transit will be adding a second bus, cutting the average wait time down to eight minutes.

Steve Rittereiser, Central Washington University’s police chief, has been working with a variety of groups to improve services offered by Central Transit.

“We felt the program started in October during nicer weather,” Rittereiser said. “Since we’re starting to see the beginning of inclement weather we think it’s a great reason to increase services.”

For more information, please call or stop by for more information.

502 W Nob Hill Blvd, Yakima 509-457-7878

Thousands of people thank you for your blood-platelet donation.

Biomat USA

GRIFOLS

Saving lives...one donation at a time.
France's civil unrest and rioting has been slowed down with emergency measures such as curfews. This occurs after 13 straight nights of firebombings and car-bombings. The riots broke out over issues such as unemployment and racism. Areas in Belgium and Germany have seen copy-cat attacks, but nothing on the scale as that in France.

The number of sex scenes on television has almost doubled according to a recent Kaiser Family Foundation survey. There were around 3,800 sex scenes, up from 1,900 in 1996. Fourteen percent of the shows with sex in them are also discussing safe sex methods in some way.

Five major oil company chiefs defended their companies' profits to senators hearing Wednesday. This comes in the wake of price-gouging against the companies.

Cincinnati Ohio elected its first black mayor Tuesday. State Sen. Mark Mallory won in a nonpartisan runoff. Incumbent Mayor Charlie Luken did not seek re-election. This comes in the wake of 2001 rioting after the death of a black man during a police arrest.

San Francisco voters approved a ban on hangdogs Tuesday. The ban prohibits the manufacture and sale of hangdogs in the city and having a gun in the home or workplace. This makes it the third city after Washington and Chicago to adopt such measures. Voters also approved a measure to encourage cities to not to allow military recruiters on school grounds.

Texas voters approved a constitutional prohibition on same-sex marriage on Tuesday. It is the nineteenth state to have such an amendment. A law banning gay marriage had been in place.

Just when you thought Central Washington University couldn't get any more diverse, the Associated Students CWU Board of Directors is expanding its varied global teachings of a wide array of other cultures during the Fifth Annual International Education Week. On Nov. 14, the ASCWU/BOD will hold a culture and coffee kickoff at 10:30 a.m. in the Yakama Room in the Student union. The Board is inviting students and faculty who will be included during the week.

The Office of International Studies and Programs will begin a new Faculty Speakers Series Program next Tuesday in the Mary Grupe Center.

"To broaden student's attitudes and opinions with international studies," said John Strasser, Vice President for Academic Affairs. "We want students in general to be aware of the opportunity.

The program will focus on CWU faculty who involves international teaching, research and services. The new series will demonstrate diverse speeches from CWU faculty about their academic and intellectual tasks.

"We want students to be excited about these things," said Heather Barclay Hamie, Study Abroad and Exchange Programs. "It's important to do this to support the faculty. We just encourage people to love to see them out there sharing their work.

The first speaker will be Michael Launius, executive director of the Office of International Studies and Programs. Launius will be touching on his experiences in South Africa and Namibia and the research related to international studies.

Although the first speaker is slated for next week, there is no schedule for the remainder of the series. There will be one speaker per month during the fall, winter and spring quarters. Each speech will deal with a particular international issue.

The events will turn to the Passport Program 8 p.m. on Tuesday, which will be held in the residence halls concluding in the International House (Ander­son Hall). The Passport Program features students visiting different residents' halls as a journey through countries. Each resident hall will represent a different country and each student will receive a passport from their RA which will give them access to each building. Students will collect stamps for their passport, learn about International Housing and meet the students and faculty involved. The program is free and open to all students.

A karate demonstration will be held by the University Karate Club at noon on Wednesday in the SUB Pit. It will teach self-defense, authentic fighting and demonstrations on board breaking. It will also feature Ian Quitadamo who will break a baseball bat.

The International Opportunities Fair will be held at 10 a.m. on Thursday at the SUB Pit. The CWU World's fair will represent departments throughout campus and will give information about studying abroad and learning foreign languages along with volunteering with international students and other international opportunities. Students can find their own international knowledge by playing "Where in the World?"

Students should make their way over to the International Games at 7 p.m. on Thursday in Barto Lounge. Anyone interested in playing games from other countries or American games join the fun. There will be Japanese karate and many international games.

"We want a chance to get students aware of outside the country and aware of international studies," said Harmony Defazio, advisor for the Study Abroad and Exchange Programs. As the week con cludes, the Walk Around the World will be held at 10 a.m. on Friday in the Mary Grupe Center.

International education week kicks off by Jon Metzger Staff reporter

Education week events

Nov. 14, 7 p.m.- "Tortilla Curtain" student panel and a viewing of the film "Crash." Hertz Auditorium.

Nov. 15, 11 a.m.- Faculty Speaker Series- "South Africa in the Post-Apartheid Era" by Michael Launius, Mary Grupe Center.

Nov. 16, 7 p.m.- Cuban and Afro-Cuban musical performance. "Tirma Libre." SUB Ballroom. 9:30-11 p.m.

CWU World's Fair/SUB Pit

Nov. 17, 7-10 p.m.- International Games Night. Barto Lounge.

Nov. 18, 6-8 p.m.- Walk Around the World. Presentations of cultures from around the world. Mary Grupe Center.

John Trudell, Native American activist/songwriter, has devoted himself to the American Indian movement and has been fighting over inequality.

The film "Trudell" traces his story from his childhood to his life and it was shown on Tuesday as part of the Classic Film Series.

Trudell highlights human rights, democracy

by Tieh-Pai Chen

A board has been placed in Student Union Board for students to express their opinions on the slogans on T-shirts produced by Abercrombie & Fitch. Slogans include "I had a nightmare I was a brunette," "You better make more than I can spend," "No car, no money, no chance," etc. The company's Christmas catalogue contains a sex advice column that advises men on the benefits of expressing their opinions on the slogans on T-shirts produced by Abercrombie & Fitch. Slogans include "I had a nightmare I was a brunette," "You better make more than I can spend," "No car, no money, no chance," etc. The company's Christmas catalogue contains a sex advice column that advises men on the benefits of expressing their opinions on the slogans on T-shirts produced by Abercrombie & Fitch. Slogans include "I had a nightmare I was a brunette," "You better make more than I can spend," "No car, no money, no chance," etc. The company's Christmas catalogue contains a sex advice column that advises men on the benefits of expressing their opinions on the slogans on T-shirts produced by Abercrombie & Fitch. Slogans include "I had a nightmare I was a brunette," "You better make more than I can spend," "No car, no money, no chance," etc. The company's Christmas catalogue contains a sex advice column that advises men on the benefits of expressing their opinions on the slogans on T-shirts produced by Abercrombie & Fitch. Slogans include "I had a nightmare I was a brunette," "You better make more than I can spend," "No car, no money, no chance," etc. The company's Christmas catalogue contains a sex advice column that advises men on the benefits of expressing their opinions on the slogans on T-shirts produced by Abercrombie & Fitch. Slogans include "I had a nightmare I was a brunette," "You better make more than I can spend," "No car, no money, no chance," etc. The company's Christmas catalogue contains a sex advice column that advises men on the benefits of expressing their opinions on the slogans on T-shirts produced by Abercrombie & Fitch. Slogans include "I had a nightmare I was a brunette," "You better make more than I can spend," "No car, no money, no chance," etc. The company's Christmas catalogue contains a sex advice column that advises men on the benefits of expressing their opinions on the slogans on T-shirts produced by Abercrombie & Fitch. Slogans include "I had a nightmare I was a brunette," "You better make more than I can spend," "No car, no money, no chance," etc. The company's Christmas catalogue contains a sex advice column that advises men on the benefits of expressing their opinions on the slogans on T-shirts produced by Abercrombie & Fitch. Slogans include "I had a nightmare I was a brunette," "You better make more than I can spend," "No car, no money, no chance," etc. The company's Christmas catalogue contains a sex advice column that advises men on the benefits of expressing their opinions on the slogans on T-shirts produced by Abercrombie & Fitch. Slogans include "I had a nightmare I was a brunette," "You better make more than I can spend," "No car, no money, no chance," etc. The company's Christmas catalogue contains a sex advice column that advises men on the benefits of} Rabbi travels from California to administer services

by Kelly Hines Staff reporter

Seven of Central Washington University's faculty members will be speaking at a gender symposium entitled "The Gendered Life of a Centered Media" starting at 10 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 10 in the Mary Grupe Center.

According to the Empowerment Center, the symposium will discuss the gender inequalities in today's media.

Adrian Elmo, the men's events programmer for the Empowerment Center, said this symposium will discuss violence in general and women's rights as well as gender in media.

"Gender is skewed in media," Elmo said. "[Students should know] how gender is presented in media."

One of the speakers at the symposium is professor of family studies and certified family life educator, Joan Amby for Wildcat Pride Week and Amby. Amby wrote a book called perspectives on gender, media and violence. Her presentations last year included "Talk sex with Dr. Elmo" and gender equality in media. Her presentation will be entitled "The Best Sex Book Ever" and gender issues, financial planning, professional dress, how to prepare for interviews, diversity and marriage and teaching ethics and professionalism in family studies.

Her presentation will be entitled "The Up Side of Gender" and will put a positive spin on gender. Amby is speaking at this symposium because one of the chapters in her book focuses on gender. Her presentations last year included "Talk sex with Dr. Amby" for Wildcat Pride Week and "Sexual Health" for the Central's leadership conference. Last year Amby gave a presentation called "Sexuality and Aging," to the Ellensburg Senior center.

Lene Pedersen, professor of anthropology at Central will also speak at the symposium. "I like to get students to share my research and issues," Pedersen said. "I'll like to discuss issues on research."

One of the speakers at the symposium is professor of family studies and certified family life educator, Joan Amby for Wildcat Pride Week and Amby. Amby wrote a book called perspectives on gender, media and violence. Her presentations last year included "Talk sex with Dr. Elmo" and gender equality in media. Her presentation will be entitled "The Best Sex Book Ever" and gender issues, financial planning, professional dress, how to prepare for interviews, diversity and marriage and teaching ethics and professionalism in family studies.

Her presentation will be entitled "The Up Side of Gender" and will put a positive spin on gender. Amby is speaking at this symposium because one of the chapters in her book focuses on gender. Her presentations last year included "Talk sex with Dr. Amby" for Wildcat Pride Week and "Sexual Health" for the Central's leadership conference. Last year Amby gave a presentation called "Sexuality and Aging," to the Ellensburg Senior center.

Lene Pedersen, professor of anthropology at Central will also speak at the symposium. "I like to get students to share my research and issues," Pedersen said. "I'll like to discuss issues on research."

by Elia Bowman Staff reporter

About once a month, Rabbi Josh Whinston boards a plane funded by Yakima's Temple Shalom synagogue and journeys from his rabbinical school in Los Angeles to Temple Shalom to sing psalms, give sermons and participate in discussions. Once each quarter, Whinston tries to make time to visit Central Washington University's campus to do the same.

On Friday Nov. 4, a number of Central students and community residents gathered in the Mary Grupe Center to observe Shabbat, the day Jewish people believe God rested from his creation of the world. The ceremony, headed by Whinston, was organized by Central's Jewish Student Organization's faculty advisor Fred McDonald and Jen Estroff, a graduate of Washington State University who now works professionally at Central as a residence hall coordinator.

The ceremony began with lighting the two Shabbat candles and was followed with songs and recitations from "Gates of Prayer," a book of Reform Judaism's liturgy. The psalms allowed with songs and recitations occurred.

According to the Empowerment Center, the symposium will discuss the gender inequalities in today's media.

Adrian Elmo, the men's events programmer for the Empowerment Center, said this symposium will discuss violence in general and women's rights as well as gender in media.

"Gender is skewed in media," Elmo said. "[Students should know] how gender is presented in media."

One of the speakers at the symposium is professor of family studies and certified family life educator, Joan Amby for Wildcat Pride Week and Amby. Amby wrote a book called perspectives on gender, media and violence. Her presentations last year included "Talk sex with Dr. Elmo" and gender equality in media. Her presentation will be entitled "The Best Sex Book Ever" and gender issues, financial planning, professional dress, how to prepare for interviews, diversity and marriage and teaching ethics and professionalism in family studies.

Her presentation will be entitled "The Up Side of Gender" and will put a positive spin on gender. Amby is speaking at this symposium because one of the chapters in her book focuses on gender. Her presentations last year included "Talk sex with Dr. Amby" for Wildcat Pride Week and "Sexual Health" for the Central's leadership conference. Last year Amby gave a presentation called "Sexuality and Aging," to the Ellensburg Senior center.

Lene Pedersen, professor of anthropology at Central will also speak at the symposium. "I like to get students to share my research and issues," Pedersen said. "I'll like to discuss issues on research."

One of the speakers at the symposium is professor of family studies and certified family life educator, Joan Amby for Wildcat Pride Week and Amby. Amby wrote a book called perspectives on gender, media and violence. Her presentations last year included "Talk sex with Dr. Elmo" and gender equality in media. Her presentation will be entitled "The Best Sex Book Ever" and gender issues, financial planning, professional dress, how to prepare for interviews, diversity and marriage and teaching ethics and professionalism in family studies.

Her presentation will be entitled "The Up Side of Gender" and will put a positive spin on gender. Amby is speaking at this symposium because one of the chapters in her book focuses on gender. Her presentations last year included "Talk sex with Dr. Amby" for Wildcat Pride Week and "Sexual Health" for the Central's leadership conference. Last year Amby gave a presentation called "Sexuality and Aging," to the Ellensburg Senior center.

Lene Pedersen, professor of anthropology at Central will also speak at the symposium. "I like to get students to share my research and issues," Pedersen said. "I'll like to discuss issues on research."

"Shabbat is a day to cease from working and reflect on the week that just occurred."

- Fred McDonald faculty advisor Jewish Student Organization

The Student Health and Counseling Center will be closed on Friday, November 11, 2005 in observance of Veteran's Day.

Health Services will also be closed on Saturday, November 12th.

We will resume normal business hours on Monday, November 14th.

Phone lines open at 7:30

Health Services Business Hours:
Mon, Wed, Fri: 8am - 5pm Tues, Thurs: 8am - 7pm Sat: 9am - 1pm

The Happy Market

Beer- 1,000 different brands - Largest in Washington State

Wine- 1,500 different brands, including the top 100 sellers

Cigarettes & tobacco - 1,200 different brands - Largest in Ellensburg

 ALSO...

Japanese Beer Japanese Cigarettes

Phone cards to Asia Sake

HAPPY'S MARKET

UNIVERSITY STREET MAIN WAY

207 University Way (509) 925-3500

Observer — News — November 10, 2005
This page seems to discuss incarceration rates and prison facilities, mentioning a statistic about the increase in prison populations from 1995 to 2004, and debates on whether a new jail is needed. The text also references the U.S. Justice Department's Bureau of Justice Statistics and discusses the impact of putting and keeping criminals in jail, arguing that the argument is similar to the claim that building bigger jails is just as simple as adding one to one, typical American thinking.

Additionally, there is a section discussing the observance of an intellectual event and the behavior of students attending it. The text mentions that the observance was put on by faculty members and that students' behavior was concerning, with some students not showing up to the lecture and others leaving prematurely.

Another section discusses the impact of incarceration rates on society and the government's role in it. The text mentions the costs associated with building larger correction facilities and discusses the rationale behind it. It also touches on the idea that putting and keeping criminals in jail is working and that this argument is similar to the claim that building bigger jails is just as simple as adding one to one, typical American thinking.

Furthermore, the text mentions that the crime rate is not the same as the incarceration rate, as long as there is a crime committed, people should be punished but are kept behind bars instead of being released to society.

Lastly, the text discusses the behavior of the audience at the observance and the rationale behind it, mentioning that the audience got up and left after a speaker made a rude gesture. The text also mentions that the audience was not engaged after 7 p.m., and the students that left after the first should not have bothered coming.

The text also mentions the cost of incarceration and the impact it has on society, including the cost of building new facilities and the cost of keeping people in prison. It also discusses the impact of this on the government's budget and the economy.

Overall, the text provides a detailed analysis of the incarceration rate and its impact on society, government, and the economy.
Thoughts in retrospect to the April 23rd assault

So the trial did not go the way that everyone wanted. Stories did not match up and after six months, I could not identify the two gentlemen that had assaulted me, especially since I have literally seen one of them twice, the first, as he was driving his elbow into my temple, and the second at the trial.

So what do I have to show for it? Cracked ribs, now healed, a healed broken foot, more damage to my spine, a plethora of bruises and cuts on the front and back of my head, now healed, a crooked nose, and a darkened spirit.

Also, I was and still am dealing with: an attorney that was not helpful or informative, so called friends that are saying "I" messed up the trial, and about $900 in personal medical expenses.

So like I told the city's criminal attorney, "Next time I hear 'you fucking faggot,'" or see someone being bullied by ignorance, "I think I'll turn my head the other way, just like everyone else did on April 23, 2005."

And so for right now, please don't come up to me and ask me what's wrong.

Jesse David Simon
Senior, Art

---

I-90: No set completion date for work

because of the slick conditions," Mangold thought there were a few times his Subaru was going to slide out while driving over Steven's icy roads. Like all wary travelers, time spent on the road was what killed the journey.

"I was just tired from driving," Mangold said. "I was just like 'get me back to Ellensburg.' Driving just took a long time and it was annoying." He left his home in west Seattle at 12:15 p.m. and hadn't got back to Ellensburg until 4:55 later that afternoon.

Wildfire Construction, the company hired to clean up the slide, installed a 160-foot long, 12-foot high steel mesh fence on Monday to contain the falling rocks on the westbound side of the freeway. With the fence in place, WSDOT has opened one lane of traffic in each direction.

According to the WSDOT Website, the challenge of the clean up is the location of the slide. It is a narrow passage through the Cascades and the construction team must move in the east bond lanes to work on the slide clean up.

As of Tuesday night, WSDOT has no date set for completing the work required to re-open all lanes of traffic on Snoqualmie.

---

Letters to the Editor

Unconfirmed reasons leave reader irate, disappointed

I must commend Clay McBride for his letter to the editor last week concerning Pat Lewis's article on the demonstration at The Starlight on Oct. 21. It seems that most people are keen to abstain from rocking the boat with their opinions. I'm glad someone took the time to write in.

I find it sad and deeply disturbing that a newspaper written by and for university students operates in this manner. As a proactive advocate for equality in all facets of life, I was genuinely interested in the protests being held at The Starlight. However, Pat Lewis's article left me feeling deflated and surprisingly irate. Not only was Lewis's article weakly written with a sprinkling of glaring errors, but it did nothing to bring light to the reasons for the demonstrations. Maybe BSU and PSU did "protest racial and ethnic discrimination," but the article left many questions in my mind. Why were they protesting? Why did they choose The Starlight as a target? What did The Starlight do that is so terrible? Just what in the hell went out? I wanted answers, and all Lewis did was make me furious that his article passed through the hands of the editors without serious modification.

Yoko Kan was quoted in this article saying, "In 2005 ignorance is not an excuse," but when writers of the Observer assigned to cover an event are not present to the experience completely, I have no choice but to be ignorant, or, on my hearsay. I suppose when a college newspaper uses twice as much space to announce the opening of a new Wendy's, we can all know exactly where their priorities lie. This paper is a joke. I and genuinely pity anyone who works on it.

Rachel Pylon
Senior
English, Political Science

---

JAIL: Needs improvements

fundamental cause of the increasing number of prisoners is the dysfunctional legal system. However, the defeated new jail proposal does not mean community members have recognized the problem of the legal system, but only reflect that the Law and Justice Council did a poor job on the demonstration itself.

tem itself, but only reflect that the Law and Justice Council did a poor job on the demonstration itself. But only recognize that the Law and Justice Council did a poor job on the demonstration itself.

tem itself.

---

PANEL: Students discuss novel next week

"If I don't know about my own people," he wondered, "How can I make sense of others?" He makes the point of certain people having certain positions in life.

We accept things," he said, "but we don't think about that authentic voice. Unless you are immersed, or have paid your dues in that culture, it's difficult to hear that voice."

The final presentation of the evening was by Stack, who presented "Confronting Borders: Real, Imaginary, or otherwise." As an artist Stack was the first artist from Eastern Washington to participate in the Bumbershoot arts festival in Seattle, and her show was called "Recontextualized Vistas." The theme was revisited in her discussion, but her main point was about dichotomies in American culture.

"There is a heightened awareness of race and ethnicity," she said. "This dichotomy is a very real issue for divided ethnic groups. There is more to it than black and white divisions."

In the end, the presentations raised more questions than they answered, and the conversation surrounding "The Tortilla Curtain" is far from over. "What do we get when we pull back the curtain?" Pimomo asked. "There are not two sides," he said, "it's entire communities. Have we achieved this thing called America? If we are this diverse, can we have this communication in a context of being American, or can we just be good, decent human beings?"

---

The Tortilla Curtain Events

What: Student led panel discussion on 'The Tortilla Curtain' following the movie "Crash" When: Nov. 14 6 p.m. Where: Hertz Auditorium

If you have opinions on The Tortilla Curtain please send them to: Observer@cwu.edu. We will print as many entries as possible. Please keep submissions under 500 words.

---

Editor's Note

Regarding the Oct. 27 Starlight Protest story, The Observer will publish more information as soon as there is legal documentation. The Observer strives to provide as much information as is legally available, in a timely fashion.

---

The Tortilla Curtain "Recontextualized Vistas." The theme was revisited in her discussion, but her main point was about dichotomies in American culture. "There is a heightened awareness of race and ethnicity," she said. "This dichotomy is a very real issue for divided ethnic groups. There is more to it than black and white divisions." In the end, the presentations raised more questions than they answered, and the conversation surrounding "The Tortilla Curtain" is far from over. "What do we get when we pull back the curtain?" Pimomo asked. "There are not two sides," he said, "it's entire communities. Have we achieved this thing called America? If we are this diverse, can we have this communication in a context of being American, or can we just be good, decent human beings?"

---

The Tortilla Curtain Events

What: Student led panel discussion on 'The Tortilla Curtain' following the movie "Crash" When: Nov. 14 6 p.m. Where: Hertz Auditorium

I-90: No set completion date for work
by Katie Murdoch
Staff reporter

Under stage lights, a new found appreciation for the working class emerges.

Central Washington University's Department of Theatre Arts is opening their musical production of "Working" tonight in McConnell Auditorium.

Directed by George W. Bellah III, "Working" is the only musical running during the Theatre department's six show season.

Bellah said he suggested "Working" because students and audiences will learn from the themes represented throughout the show.

"We feel it's going to offer something to our students," Bellah said. "The focus is on blue collar jobs we don't think about."

"Working" encompasses the efforts of 36 cast members, a seven-piece band and a production team and crew comprised of Central faculty, staff, students and members of the community. Some cast members from the community are the age of the character they're portraying.

"We're trying to be authentic to the jobs to honor the spirit of the original people's words," Garnett said. "You're finding respect for these people."

"Working" deals with a series of themes that raise awareness of people wanting respect for what they do.

"What it comes down to is celebrating the uncelebrated," Bellah said. "You're finding respect for these people."

"Working" is also part of the Performing Arts Inaugural Presidential Speaker Series.

"This is the only show where each character is based off a real character," Garnett said. "The interviews became monologues using the original people's words."

"Working" also involves collaborating with the director and costume designers.

As rehearsals progress, the pieces come together and result in a complete performance.

"This is a pretty large undertaking," said Leslee Caul, director of Theatre Arts and performance major. "You learn to appreciate everyone."

"Organized hysteria," Garnett said. "It's crazy, but it all comes together."

"Working" encompasses the efforts of 36 cast members, a seven-piece band and a production team and crew comprised of Central faculty, staff, students and members of the community. Some cast members from the community are the age of the character they're portraying.

"We're trying to be authentic to the jobs to honor the spirit of the characters' stories."

The backdrop plays a crucial role in further telling the show's story. The running theme of celebrating unappreciated American working class is woven into the design of the sets. The industrial, working class factory look intertwined with the costumes and performances combine to tell the characters' stories.

"We work from one concept that we share of what the show should look like," Bond said.

"The rehearsals become very full," Kristin Calhoun, senior Theatre Arts major said. "Calhoun is the stage manager for the production."

"It's crunch time," said Tina Perna, senior Theatre Arts major. "Perna is in charge of hair and makeup design for "Working." Part of her job is teaching the cast how to apply their makeup and style their hair to fit the time period. She also keeps track of pieces of costumes such as hats and jewelry.

Two hours before each performance, Perna makes sure all the wigs are head-ready, makeup is going on and that none of the cast is "muddy," meaning nobody needs their makeup re-done.

"If there are any changes, they need to be made immediately," Perna said.

"Working" opens at 7 p.m. tonight in McConnell Auditorium.

Performance Dates: Nov. 10 and 17 at 7 p.m.
Nov. 11, 12, 16 and 19 at 8 p.m.
Nov. 18 at 2 p.m. Matinee. All seats $8
Ticket Prices: $10 Students, $12 Seniors and $14 General Admission
Apply to be an RA or CP Today!

Info Sessions:
- Monday, November 21
  7 p.m. | Carmody Lounge
- Tuesday, November 29
  7 p.m. | Muzzall Lounge
- Tuesday, January 10, 2006
  7 p.m. | Barto Lounge
- Thursday, January 12, 2006
  7 p.m. | Barto Lounge

Applications available now
Barto Housing Office, Student Employment Office

Applications due by 4 p.m. Friday, January 20, 2006

Questions? Call 963-8812

Positions Available
- Resident Assistant
- Community Programmer

Come See Ellensburg’s Own
“National Treasure!”

Oldest Fraternal Lodge - Chartered 1882

See the Historic Building!
Meet Members / Ask Questions!

Ellensburg Masonic Lodge #39
111 1/2 6th Avenue
Ellensburg

(Above Better Life Natural Food Store)

Tuesday the 15th of November 7:00 pm

For Info Call Tedd Hansen: 509-925-5925

http://www.ellensburg.com/masons39/
The Central Washington University music department will be performing the Erin Klotz Concert of Memories at 2 p.m. on Sunday Oct. 13 in the music facility auditorium.

Klotz was a Central student in the music department who died Nov. 18, 2001 after being hit head-on by a drunk driver on Snoqualmie Pass. The 20-year-old junior was driving with another Central student, Tracey Fischer, on 1-90 when she was killed.

The concert is open to the public. A tree will be dedicated to Klotz during the concert in honor and celebration of her life. Also, a contrabass flute, which was partially purchased with donations to the Erin Klotz Memorial Fund, will have its debut during the concert, according to music professor Hal Ott.

- Concert of memories

by Caitlin Kuhlmann
Staff reporter

The 20-year-old junior was driving with another Central student, Tracey Fischer, on 1-90 when she was killed. The concert is open to the public.

The Central Washington University music department will be performing the Erin Klotz Concert of Memories at 2 p.m. on Sunday Oct. 13 in the music facility auditorium.

Klotz was a Central student in the music department who died Nov. 18, 2001 after being hit head-on by a drunk driver on Snoqualmie Pass. The 20-year-old junior was driving with another Central student, Tracey Fischer, on 1-90 when she was killed.

The concert is open to the public. A tree will be dedicated to Klotz during the concert in honor and celebration of her life. Also, a contrabass flute, which was partially purchased with donations to the Erin Klotz Memorial Fund, will have its debut during the concert, according to music professor Hal Ott.

- Concert of memories

by Caitlin Kuhlmann
Staff reporter

The 20-year-old junior was driving with another Central student, Tracey Fischer, on 1-90 when she was killed. The concert is open to the public.

The Central Washington University music department will be performing the Erin Klotz Concert of Memories at 2 p.m. on Sunday Oct. 13 in the music facility auditorium.

Klotz was a Central student in the music department who died Nov. 18, 2001 after being hit head-on by a drunk driver on Snoqualmie Pass. The 20-year-old junior was driving with another Central student, Tracey Fischer, on 1-90 when she was killed.

The concert is open to the public. A tree will be dedicated to Klotz during the concert in honor and celebration of her life. Also, a contrabass flute, which was partially purchased with donations to the Erin Klotz Memorial Fund, will have its debut during the concert, according to music professor Hal Ott.
Every Wednesday night Mike Steele gets to share his passion for music with a little slice of Ellensburg. Grant’s Pizza Place, located on University Way across from Lind Hall, is allowing musicians like Steele to come together and play music at their weekly open mic nights.

“Open mic is where musicians can gather and share music and any other form of entertainment,” Steele, senior Staff reporter or with Steele’s band, the J. Steele Project, which acts as the house band. No scheduling is necessary, as time on stage is given on a first come, first serve basis. Just let Steele know you want to play when you arrive.

“Any form of free form expression is what we’re all about,” said Rodney Turner Central alumni, the band’s percussionist. Anything from acoustic guitar and drumming to rap and stand-up comedy is welcomed.

Musicians can expect a small, intimate venue with a raw sound that allows listeners to feel engaged.

Open mic night gets its start in winter of 2003 when a Grant’s customer suggested the idea to owner Kathy Grant. “It took people a while to figure it out, but now that the word has gotten out, we’re just slammed,” Grant said.

After a slow start, Wednesdays at Grant’s have now become what regulars fondly refer to as “Wild Wednesday,” which often has as many as 300 people coming through between 8:30 and 11 p.m. Drink specials are available from 4 p.m. till 11 p.m. with music running from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m.

Local musicians rock at Grant’s Pizza Place
by Rebecca Thornton Staff reporter

J. Steele Project is the house band at Grant’s Pizza and plays every Wednesday night. Anyone can play during Open Mic Night, make sure to arrive early to sign up.

“Who Rules? Not this game
by Meghan Hanley Staff reporter

Rebekka Armstrong was just 18 years old when she reached her childhood goal of posing for Playboy magazine. As Miss September 1986, Armstrong led the Hollywood lifestyle for three years before she got the news that she was HIV positive.

Armstrong will be speaking at Central Washington University at 7 p.m. on Tuesday Nov. 15 in the Samuelson Union Building (SUB) ballroom. She will be telling her life story, explaining the reality of living with HIV and AIDS and informing students how to stop the spread of HIV and AIDS. The presentation is sponsored by Campus Life and Wildcat Wellness Center.

“This is a good story for people to know who are our age.”

Armstrong did not contract HIV from a one-night stand with a centerfold but rather from a young man she spent a summer with during her teens. In the 1980s, having HIV could end a career, so after learning of her condition Armstrong took great steps to hide the disease.

In 1994 everything changed. Armstrong publicly announced her disease in an interview with The Advocate, a gay and lesbian magazine. Since then she has devoted her life to educating people about HIV and AIDS, and how to prevent the spread of the disease.

“Currently she’s doing body building competitions and it’s pretty amazing for someone with a disease like that to be in such good health and be able to overcome it,” Prestegard said. “Everyone has things in life they have to overcome.”

Armstrong travels the country spreading her message of prevention and safe sex. Her presentation at Central will be a way for students to learn about the reality that is living with HIV and AIDS.

“Everyone can benefit from her story.”
Road gets rougher in new conference

Pat Brown
Sports editor

Saturday, Oct. 22 a good crowd turned out for the Homecoming game. The weather was nice and the Central Washington Wildcats looked sharp scoring three touchdowns in the first quarter. With 14:04 left in the second quarter senior wide receiver Nate Brokman broke into a touchdown. Then 79 seconds and 27 points later the Wildcats have a 48-13 lead, killing Western Oregon’s hopes of a come back and setting an NCAA scoring record in the process. The lopsided win marked the end of an era, as it was the Wildcats final game at Tomlinson Stadium as members of the Great Northwest Athletic Conference.

Central Washington will see a whole new kind of play next season as the Wildcats move from the GNAC to the Northwest Conference.

Next year when the Wildcats join the North Central Conference competition and travel will increase.

"Competing on a level playing field [will be the hardest part of switching conferences]," Head Coach John Zambelis said. "Most of these teams are fully-funded."

By "fully-funded" Zambelis means that the teams have maximum amounts of scholarships allowed by the NCAA, something that Central does not have.

The Wildcats just missed the playoffs this past season with an 8-2 record, placing eighth in the northwest region. Playoff berths are awarded to the top six teams in each of the countries four regions.

Athletic Director Jack Bishop says Athletic Director Jack Bishop says "I'm excited, winning against better teams will be better for the overall program."

The Battle in Seattle will be moved to later in the season starting next year. In the 2006 season the Battle in Seattle will be played on Oct. 21. In 2007 it will be on Oct. 20, and Oct. 18 in 2008. There will be a home game prior to the Battle in Seattle for the next three years.

The Rodeo Bowl is still open for the 2007 and 2008 seasons. The game — played Labor Day weekend — may eventually be cancelled since it is difficult to schedule says Bishop. If the cancellation were to occur the Wildcats most likely would go to a ten game schedule.

Schedule 2006-08

2006

North Dakota
Sept. 15

Humboldt State
Sept. 9

University Montana
Sept. 16

U of Minnesota-Duluth
Sept. 23

St. Cloud State
Sept. 30

South Dakota
Oct. 7

Western Oregon
Oct. 14

Western Washington
Oct. 21

Augustana
Oct. 28

Minnesota State-Mankato
Nov. 4

Nebraska-Omaha
Nov. 11

2007

OPEN
Aug. 31

Humboldt State
Sept. 8

North Dakota
Sept. 15

U of Minnesota-Duluth
Sept. 22

St. Cloud State
Sept. 29

South Dakota
Oct. 6

Western Oregon
Oct. 13

Western Washington
Oct. 20

Augustana
Oct. 27

Mankato
Nov. 3

Nebraska-Omaha
Nov. 10

2008

OPEN
Aug. 30

OPEN
Sept. 6

U of Minnesota-Duluth
Sept. 13

Nebraska-Omaha
Sept. 20

Minnesota State-Mankato
Sept. 27

Augustana
Oct. 4

Western Washington
Oct. 11

North Dakota
Oct. 18

South Dakota
Oct. 25

St. Cloud State bolded games @ home

By Kelley Collins
Staff reporter

There were huge, laughter, tears and flowers Saturday night as four Central Washington University seniors played in their final home volleyball match of the season. On a chilly fall night!

The Wildcats whooped up on the Humboldt State University Lumberjacks 11-13, 7-9 (GNAC) with scores of 10-18, 30-10 and 30-20.

Seniors Crystal Ames, LeAnne McGahuey, Cristina Null and Darcy McGahuey suited up in their locker room for the last time on Nov. 5. These four seniors have contributed immensely to the success Central has had the past two seasons. They led the Wildcats to an undefeated regular season last year and their first playoff appearance since 1991. Last year's playoff appearance was their first as a member of the GNAC.

"It was pretty sad playing in Nicholson Pavilion for the last time," Scheldt said. "I looked at the score with five points until we won and looked around at all the people in the stands and at my family. I shook it off." Central (20-4, 14-2 GNAC) dominated the Lumberjacks in almost every category. They had 47 kills to Humboldt's 34, 47 digs to 45, 10 blocks to two and had a .375 hitting percentage to Humboldt State's .042.

"It wasn't really sad," Ames said. "It was because it's our last home game, but it's not our last game. We have to do it all again. I'll really miss our fans though. I love them and the support they give us." On Thursday, Nov. 3 the Wildcats defeated Western Oregon (10-14, 8-8 GNAC) 30-18, 30-22 and 30-16. McGahuey had a team high 12 kills and four blocks, while outside hitter Ames added eight kills.

Junior setter Lindsey Dollente added another stellar night with 34 assists and libero Sholdt once again led the Wildcats with 12 digs.

Ames added 10 digs bringing her total to 1,006 on her career. She is only the fourth Central player to have over a thousand digs in her career.

Central had one of their best serving nights of the season, with eight service aces and committing only two errors from behind the line.

The two Wildcats sweeps last week bring their total to an impressive 16-three game sweeps on the season. Last week Ames became the first Central player to have both 1,000 digs and 1,000 kills in her career.

"I'm excited because it's usual. I've only been here for three years. This shows my hard work," Ames said. "Someone in the future will have a thousand digs and a thousand kills, but I'll always be the first. That's something no one can take away from me."

This week the Wildcats travel to Alaska to take on Alaska Anchorage (7-17, 4-12 GNAC) and Alaska Fairbanks (1-19, 1-5 GNAC). Central swept both of these teams the last time they met at Nicholsoon Pavilion.

"Knowing that we can go to play-offs, we need to go to Alaska, play hard, dominate and come home," Scheldt said. "We can't take them lightly."

Seattle Pacific clinched the GNAC crown with a win over Saint Martin's in straight sets. Seattle Pacific ends the season with a 21-5 overall record and a 15-2 conference record.

Seattle Pacific gets an automatic bid into the conference championship. Central will have to be voted into the playoffs.

Selections for the NCAA division II Pacific Regional tournament will be announced at some point this upcoming Sunday.
Central wins, but misses playoffs

By Teddy Feenberg
Asst. Sports editor

All the Central Washington Wildcats had to do this weekend was win and hope for some help from other a few other teams around the country. That quality is the Division II Football Playoffs. Only one of the two outcomes was accomplished.

The Wildcats controlled only what they could on Saturday, defeating the Humboldt State Lumberjacks 28-14 down in Arcata, Calif. They actually got the ball on their own 20 and an ultra-efficient offense equalized a 34-20 victory for the Fighting Sioux, in a game where the score doesn’t indicate how poor the contest really was for the Wildcats.

Central played another NCC resident this season and although the game resulted in a Wildcat loss, the game versus Nebraska-Omaha was nip-and-tuck the whole way. Central eventually fell 28-21 in the closing minutes, but if the game proved nothing else it was that the Wildcats could compete at a higher level and conceivably scratch out a win. Central also beat playoff bound Wisconsin-Milwaukee in the year in a shootout.

The bottom line is that John Zamberlin has built a winning program. You can’t get better in life beating up on inferior competition. While the NCC doesn’t necessarily qualify as the greatest brand of play college football has to offer, it does provide a step up from the GNAC and a substantial one at that. The Wildcats could have conceivably made the playoffs this season. Voters looked at the schedule, not the record, when they made the decision to leave them on the outside looking in. At first it will be an uphill climb for Central to make a dent in the ultra-competitive NCC. However, with time, the dream of a National Championship will gradually transform into a formidable reality.

Pat Brown
Sports editor

The most potent offensive weapons will be gone next year, Nate Brokrenon and Brian Potucek. Combined the two had 1796 yards and 22 touchdowns, which made up over two thirds of quarterback Mike Reilly’s passing yards and touchdowns. On the surface this is a major loss but other than the two senior receivers the Wildcats were a very young team.

Quarterback Mike Reilly is a freshman with skills better than most seniors. In his first year he threw for the second most touchdowns in school history with 16. His best weapons are gone but he still has three more years to best his record with very capable underclassmen.

Second string, junior running back Will Bennett will be an excellent starter next year. Bennett a faster and shifter back than Landon Hall had a better average yards per carry at 5.6 compared to Hall’s 4.7. Bennett’s average may drop next year with the extra carries but he has already proven his worthiness for the job.

On defense free safety J.R. Jameson had a conference leading seven interceptions as a freshman. Freshman cornerback Brandon Kennedy had a big year with three defensive touchdowns; two of which contributed to Central’s NCAA record setting 27 points in 79 seconds. Brokrenon and Potucek’s departure will be a big blow but the team can and will prevail. Obviously the competition will be much tougher. Last year we had North Central Conference opponents and a NAIA (inferior to NCAA) team for the three non-conference games.

Next year we have former GNAC members and a division I-AA school for non-conference opponents in our inaugural year in the NCC. It won’t be easy. The Wildcats face South Dakota, North Dakota, Nebraska-Omaha and Minnesota-Duluth next year who are currently ranked eighth, 12, 14 and 24 on 2005 d2football.com; Central is currently ranked 22.

Every year every team has to reload, that’s just part of college football. The Wildcats have less holes to fill going into next year than they did going into this year, so they will be fine.

Central wins, but misses playoffs

By Teddy Feenberg
Asst. Sports editor

All the Central Washington Wildcats had to do this weekend was win and hope for some help from other a few other teams around the country. That quality is the Division II Football Playoffs. Only one of the two outcomes was accomplished.

The Wildcats controlled only what they could on Saturday, defeating the Humboldt State Lumberjacks 28-14 down in Arcata, Calif. They actually got the ball on their own 20 and an ultra-efficient offense equalized a 34-20 victory for the Fighting Sioux, in a game where the score doesn’t indicate how poor the contest really was for the Wildcats.

Central played another NCC resident this season and although the game resulted in a Wildcat loss, the game versus Nebraska-Omaha was nip-and-tuck the whole way. Central eventually fell 28-21 in the closing minutes, but if the game proved nothing else it was that the Wildcats could compete at a higher level and conceivably scratch out a win. Central also beat playoff bound Wisconsin-Milwaukee in the year in a shootout.

The bottom line is that John Zamberlin has built a winning program. You can’t get better in life beating up on inferior competition. While the NCC doesn’t necessarily qualify as the greatest brand of play college football has to offer, it does provide a step up from the GNAC and a substantial one at that. The Wildcats could have conceivably made the playoffs this season. Voters looked at the schedule, not the record, when they made the decision to leave them on the outside looking in. At first it will be an uphill climb for Central to make a dent in the ultra-competitive NCC. However, with time, the dream of a National Championship will gradually transform into a formidable reality.

Pat Brown
Sports editor

The most potent offensive weapons will be gone next year, Nate Brokrenon and Brian Potucek. Combined the two had 1796 yards and 22 touchdowns, which made up over two thirds of quarterback Mike Reilly’s passing yards and touchdowns. On the surface this is a major loss but other than the two senior receivers the Wildcats were a very young team.

Quarterback Mike Reilly is a freshman with skills better than most seniors. In his first year he threw for the second most touchdowns in school history with 16. His best weapons are gone but he still has three more years to best his record with very capable underclassmen.

Second string, junior running back Will Bennett will be an excellent starter next year. Bennett a faster and shifter back than Landon Hall had a better average yards per carry at 5.6 compared to Hall’s 4.7. Bennett’s average may drop next year with the extra carries but he has already proven his worthiness for the job.

On defense free safety J.R. Jameson had a conference leading seven interceptions as a freshman. Freshman cornerback Brandon Kennedy had a big year with three defensive touchdowns; two of which contributed to Central’s NCAA record setting 27 points in 79 seconds. Brokrenon and Potucek’s departure will be a big blow but the team can and will prevail. Obviously the competition will be much tougher. Last year we had North Central Conference opponents and a NAIA (inferior to NCAA) team for the three non-conference games.

Next year we have former GNAC members and a division I-AA school for non-conference opponents in our inaugural year in the NCC. It won’t be easy. The Wildcats face South Dakota, North Dakota, Nebraska-Omaha and Minnesota-Duluth next year who are currently ranked eighth, 12, 14 and 24 on 2005 d2football.com; Central is currently ranked 22.

Every year every team has to reload, that’s just part of college football. The Wildcats have less holes to fill going into next year than they did going into this year, so they will be fine.
Local fans have no place to watch the Sonics with Charter not broadcasting the games in Ellensburg

by Jordan Montgomery
Staff reporter

We all remember last season when the Seattle SuperSonics came so close to going all the way against the San Antonio Spurs. Not too often do sports fans get to enjoy a show like Game Six of the Western Conference semifinals when the Sonics faced the Spurs. The Spurs escaped from the series 98-96 when Ray Allen shot and missed a three pointer with half a second left. With such a close game, Sonics fans are looking forward to some payback, but when will they get it?

For those fans living in Ellensburg and most of Kittitas Valley, they will have to hide their time. The Sonics games don’t have a home here in the Kittitas Valley. That is, it seems that the local stations don’t carry it.

Fan after fan has repeatedly been looking for it and yet comes up dry. With limited access to the broadcasts, true fans have pushed the limits striving to get to the broadcasts.

"Last year during their series against the Spurs I continually went to Wing Central to watch the game," Steve Martens, a Central accounting graduate said. "Not cause I like their food. It was just because I wanted to see the games."

"They said last year that they should have it by now but still we don’t have anything," Ernie Vorholf, senior public relations major, said. "It is supposed to be on Fox but the cable company just won’t broadcast it."

For those Ellensburg Sonics fans, Tuesday Nov. 8 is an important day. The Sonics play the Memphis Grizzlies in Memphis and the Sonics coming off a 107-102 overtime victory in their last game against the Minnesota Timberwolves has the fans wanting more. However, in Ellensburg, the only place that fans can see the Sonics in action will be at the Horseshoe Tavern or Wing Central because they are the only facilities with satellite TV.

The Sonics have signed on with Kong and Hispanivision which broadcasts in Yakima. Ellensburg’s Charter office has been in negotiations with the Sonics for some time now in order to bring the games to our area. However the Sonics have not granted them access yet.

Until things change, Ellensburg will just have to find other ways of supporting our team.

Where did the Sonics go?

Football:
Season over continued from 13

on their momentum to start the third, Duke scrambled out of the pocket in attempt to pick up a first down. Five yards later Chris Buech punted him, knocking the ball loose. It was recovered by Chris Scrupps at the 50.

Then it was Reilly’s turn. Operating on a short field, Reilly drove the offense into the redzone where he hit Brandon Robertson for an 18-yard touchdown. A Reilly to Brian Potucek hookup on the two-point conversion put Central back up by seven.

With the Wildcats clinging to a small lead it was the defense that shined the most. They shut Humboldt out in the second half surrendering only six first downs in the process. They also forced two turnovers.

Besides the Scrupps fumble recovery, J.R. Jamerson also intercepted an errant Duke throw. It was Jamerson’s second interception this season.

Central was out shot 35-9 in those, regionally ranked teams.

There were many positives and negatives that occurred throughout the turbulent season for the Central Washington women’s soccer team. "The Wildcats post a 7-12-1 record; their best finish in five years," sophomore midfielder Michelle Beattie said.

After topping Northwest Nazarene University 1-0 in late October, the Wildcats stumbled closing the season out with a 3-1 loss at Seattle Pacific University. Then Central suffered their second worst defeat of the year by an embarrasing 9-0 loss at rival Western Washington University last Saturday.

"This is a competitive conference and the difference of six points is the difference between second and sixth place in our conference," coach Michael Farrand said.

Central managed only 17 goals this season, while giving up 41. Half of those scores can be traced to two games, 11-0 at UC San Diego and 9-0 at Western. The numbers say the last two teams Central played placed second and third in the conference but Central was out shot 35-39 in those games.

Numbers can be deceiving. The defense has been solid, anchored by freshmen goal keeper Megan Michaud. Michaud earned co-player of the week honors back in September after she shut out Northwest Nazarene and Eastern Oregon.

"This team is young, one of the youngest in the conference and we’ve made great strides this year, it’s a difference like night and day from last season," Farrand said.

Still Central overcome some obstacles this season. Injuries are present in all sports and the team had their share this year. Junior midfielder Tina Thorne had an ACL injury that sidelined her for most of the season. For this reason, junior midfielder Tina Thorne had an ACL injury that sidelined her for most of the season. For this reason.

"Some of us are of our fastest players, last year in track Lindsay Mitchell, Ashley Routtine and Tina Thorne set a CWU record in the 4 x 100 relay," Farrand said.

Another hurdle was the strength of the schedule. Out of twenty games this year, Central played 11 nationally or regionally ranked teams.

"Our schedule was most competitive, but you have to play better teams to get into the playoffs," Farrand said.

Sophomore Michelle Beattie was named to the Greater Northwest Athletic All-Conference second team. While junior defender Michelle Phillips and junior forward Aria Stason were honorable mentions on the Great Northwest Athletic All-conference squad.

Late Night with the Wildcats

Monday, Nov. 14, 8-10 p.m. students will have 10 ways to win up to $5,000 at the second annual Late Night with the Wildcats. Basketball starts Nov. 18.
Running with senior Brandy Anderson

Senior co-captain Brandy Anderson had been competing on the cross country varsity squad for two years and will graduate this spring.

by Kelsey Giffin
Staff reporter

Brandy Anderson is a senior at Central Washington University and co-captain on the cross country team. Anderson is from Janesu, Alaska and graduated from Juneau-Douglas in 2001. She placed 15th at the prestigious Charles Bowles Invitational at Williamette University this year.

She was also recognized by being named the Great Northwest Athletic Conference Player of the Week for Sept. 26- Oct. 2. Anderson is majoring in elementary education and has a GPA of 3.6. Recently, Anderson placed 11th at the GNAC championships with a time of 23:48.

Q: When did you get started in cross country?
A: I swam in high school and my friend and I decided to try track. It was kind of a fluke.

Q: What are your future plans? Any marathons?
A: I'm graduating in the spring. After that I don't know. I'm really into triathlons. I'm competing in the Escape from Alcatraz in San Francisco this June.

Q: What motivates you?
A: Doing my best. If I'm going to put a lot of time into something I may as well do it the best I can.

Q: I hear you're married. How is married life?
A: It was weird at first because I'm the only married one on the team. But we have a house so we have the team over for dinner. He also comes to all the meets and cheers us on, so that's cool.

Coach Kevin Adkinson on Brandy:
Brandy has been a fantastic person to have in our program. She's a combination of everything you're looking for in an athlete. She's hard, has a good attitude and is extremely talented.

Regional results mark end of season

My name is Jared Auckland and I am a co-president of the Men's Club Soccer team. When it comes to sports and athletics, seasons come and seasons go. While working as the league commissioner and co-president of the Men's club soccer team here on campus, things haven't exactly been smooth sailing.

While one person may care about a sport, there are others who don't care as much. This was part of the problem we as a team experienced as a whole.

What I didn't know was that we would only get to play six of the 12 games scheduled. Not only is this frustrating as a league commissioner but it is frustrating as a team president and player as well. When games get cancelled it affects players, athletic supporter's and game officials as well as the people who organize the teams, leagues, schedules, etc.

On Oct. 29, the Men's Club Soccer team was scheduled to play Gonzaga University at 1 p.m. The parents, athletic supporter's and officials showed up expecting a good soccer game but the competition from Gonzaga University never did show.

Not only did Gonzaga not show but also failed to inform me— the league commissioner— and opposing team president- of the forfeit. At this point I now have to inform all my players, parents and the officials that there will be no game. This also leaves the Club Soccer team with the responsibility of paying the officials.

This is just one example of what the Men's Club Soccer team experienced more than once this past season. As the league commissioner I leave no option but to look ahead to figure out what has to happen next. My plan of attack is to work with Sports Club officials to create contracts for competing teams in upcoming seasons. Not only will this make teams accountable for travel, it will hopefully create some sort of responsibility between clubs and their universities.

Cancellation put damper on season

Jared Auckland Soccer club co-president Guest Columnist

Jared Auckland & Friends's column will appear in the Observer every Monday. Comments may be sent to sports-c@cwu.edu.

Regional results mark end of season
Rugby season gets off to strong start

by Scott Parrish
Staff reporter

The Central Washington University women's rugby club got off to a hot start this season, throttling the University of Washington on Saturday in Ellensburg. The Wildcats pushed the Huskies all over the field the entire game and came out on top 28-5. Leading the scoring attack for the Wildcats was conversion kicker and inside center, Sheila Funkho 'user. Funkhouser was perfect in the game kicking four of four conversions and scoring eight points for the squad.

The team's next game is at 10 a.m. Saturday prior to the men's rugby game. The women also share the same pitch with the men, behind Nicholson Pavilion. Both teams remain undefeated up to this point in their home pitch.

Men take on Western

The Central Washington University men's rugby team opened their season last Saturday against their rival, Western Washington University in Bellingham. After having a good preseason record of 2-1, defeating University of Montana and nationally ranked University of Washington in their final pre-season game, the team is ready to start the regular season. In the season opener against Western, the Wildcats came out hungry for a win. The team dominated the game from start to finish, leading at the half 13-0.

"I thought the team played well with the conditions we played in," senior fly half, Mike Merrill said. "It was rainy, windy and cold so the ball was hard to control at times but we made the best of it." The Vikings were able to score in the second half but the Wildcat defenders were able to contain Western's scoring attack.

"Our fullback and wingers did a good job of securing the backfield for the opposing team's kicks," Merrill said. Central put up another 10 points in the second half and the final score of the game had Central on top 23-7. Leading the scoring attack for the Wildcats was senior outside center Josh Baxter, who was three of three on field goal conversions. Merrill, senior flanker Adam Rahlon and senior scrum half Dave Jones also scored in the Wildcats victory.

"I felt the team played well and stuck to the game plan," Ralston said. The mens rugby team was impressive on top, the girls rugby team pushes forward in an attempt to find an opening. Above, Central makes a rush towards the goal line. The Wildcats dominated throughout the game, winning 2const-5. The mens rugby team was impressive as well on Saturday, beating Western Washington 23-7.

GNAC standings

Football
Conf. Overall
Central Washington 6-0 8-2
Western Washington 3-3 4-6
Humboldt State 2-4 4-6
Western Oregon 1-5 4-6

Volleyball
Seattle Pacific 15-2 21-5
Central Washington 14-2 20-4
Seattle 13-3 16-11
Western Washington 11-5 16-9
Western Oregon 8-8 10-14
Humboldt State 7-9 11-13
Northwest Nazarene 7-10 9-16
Alaska Anchorage 5-18 7-17
Alaska Fairbanks 1-15 1-19
Saint Martin's 1-15 1-22

Women's Soccer
Seattle Pacific 10-0-2 17-0-3
Seattle 7-3-2 13-5-2
Western Washington 6-5-1 9-8-2
Humboldt State 5-5-2 9-9-2
Western Oregon 5-7-0 8-12-0
Central Washington 4-7-1 7-12-1
Northwest Nazarene 1-11-0 4-15-1

Pregnant?
You have options.
1-800-395-HELP or in Ellensburg 925-2273
Free Test. Caring. Confidential.

CARENET

Located in Downtown Ellensburg at 111 East 4th

CRAM as much as you can in 60 seconds, into your JanSport pack, when you WIN our storewide spree!

CENTRAL WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

Your future is Central.
Central Washington is a EEO/AA Title IX Institution. TDD 963-2143