In less than two weeks, Americans will go to the voting booths and cast their votes for the next president, and the College Democrats and College Republicans are charging full speed ahead with get-out-and-vote activities.

The 2008 election has demonstrated plenty of excitement all across the country, particularly with young voters at colleges like Central Washington University. Polls have shown that Sen. Barack Obama's candidacy has a strong hold with voters age 18 to 25. Sen. John McCain's pick of Gov. Sarah Palin has energized the party's conservative base. Various political pundits have predicted that turnout on Election Day will be higher than previous elections.

The College Democrats are organizing activities for democratic candidates who are campaigning across the state. The most important priority on their minds: the election of Obama for president.

"This election is very important because we can either continue the failed policies of the Bush administration or go in a completely different direction," College Democrats Vice President Scott Patton, junior political science major, said. "I think we did a pretty good job overall of registering new voters," Michael Ricketts, head of the College Democrats, said. "We did a lot of advertising to tell people where they can get registered."

22-year veteran retires from force
Ellensburg police say farewell to respected officer

After being on the force for 22 years, Captain Ross Green of the Ellensburg Police Department (EPD) is retiring.

Originally in the construction industry, Green was lured to Ellensburg by its seemingly endless outdoor opportunities and an open position at the EPD. Like most young men, he had quite a few law enforcement encounters. These encounters got the gears moving toward the idea of being a police officer.

"There is nobody in my family who has been involved with law enforcement and it's something I've always been interested in, so why not?" Green said.

During his many years on the force, Green was promoted five times. Green immediately jumped into starting the K-9 unit as a regular officer. From there he climbed the ladder to corporal, sergeant, detective sergeant and finally captain.

Of Green's many contributions to the Ellensburg community, none stand out as strongly as his creation of the K-9 unit. In 1987, only one year after being hired, Green's K-9 vision became a reality. With his dog Amir at his side, the program flourished. Green trained Amir in both narcotics and patrol. This meant that Amir could not only find drugs, but was also trained in building searches and tracking assignments.

In 1992 there had been a burglary at a jewelry store downtown. Amir tracked the suspect from the jewelry store, through a field and eventually located the suspect hiding in a ditch. The day after catching the burglar, Green and Amir went out to search for evidence. Even after a day had passed, Amir found most of the stolen jewelry scattered around the field.

"Amir was incredible," Captain Dan Hansberry said. During training exercises Hansberry would pose as a criminal and try to escape the highly trained dog. Despite Hansberry's best efforts, Amir would always find his hiding spot. Today, the program is split into Does CWU have adequate Web education?

by Ken Stanton

Asst. News editor

CWU Alert! to be tested for effectiveness

by Mimi Oh

Staff reporter

Information technology project and training services project manager Deb Feinman wants students to get the message. Students can only receive the message from Central Alert's first test by keeping their contact information current. Feinman says the test is scheduled for 12:30 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 30.

"Part of the reason for doing the test is to get a sense around campus of ... where to do more personal outreach," Feinman said.

Central Washington University contracted with a company called Conected to manage the data uploaded from SAFARI. Off-campus students need to register to receive full emergency communication. E-mail and up to three phone numbers will be channels of the first-response system.

"This is the first test," Feinman said. "It will help us gauge how efficient our ... system handles the volume of calls and messages, and then measuring all of the messages that were sent [and] how many were received, so we'll know if there's any delivery problems." The number that the messages will come from is 509-963-2345. The Alert system will only convey messages in situations that may compromise campus safety and health. Weather-related situations must be severe in order to qualify.

After Oct. 30, tests will be conducted quarterly. New students are prompted to download the desktop Alert program that enables network-connected computers to receive messages. Returning students and faculty should also download the program.

Both cellular phones and landlines can receive messages, but cellular phones' mobility and popularity make them the best choice for contact.

"Get your cell phone number into SAFARI," Feinman stressed.

For more instructions, go to www.cwu.edu/alert/faq.html.
Political: Central students amp up for elections on Campus

continued from front page

Fearing. The College Democrats will also hold house parties called "Send George to Washington," later this month. Ricketts and club member Scott Josch, both senior political science majors, have worked for the Fearing campaign.

The College Republicans have held phone-banking efforts as well, like their event Oct. 18 at Kelleher Motors in Ellensburg. Eight club members and County Republicans who attended, phoned a total of 600 to 650 households, according to John Hardy, senior economics major, and president of the CWU College Republicans. The College GOP will hold more phone events in the weeks leading up to Election Day. Hardy remained skeptical of McCain's chances against Obama in November.

"[We think] he's mounting a comeback," Hardy said. "Only Election Day will tell."

The College Republicans have also done door-to-door campaigning with the Kittitas County Republicans for state Sen. Dino Rossi, who lost to Gov. Chris Gregoire by just over 100 votes in 2004. Jake Stillwell, senior political science major, a fellow at the Civic Engagement Center, is spearheading the Center's get-out-the-vote effort. Last month, the center did election action training, where voting officials hailing from across the county trained students on how to conduct registration drives. The College Democrats and Republicans provided information on McCain and Obama. This year marks the first election in which Washington state will vote entirely by mail. Stillwell said this is a great reason to have a grassroots voter registration program.

"Our goal is to make the process as simple as possible so that no one is deterred by the confusion of our new registration. This has enabled the Civic Engagement Center to post ads online and social networking Web sites like MySpace and Facebook. According to Stillwell, they registered over 300 people to vote with a staff of about 20 people on a regular basis. Registration in Washington state ended on Oct. 4.

"That really changes how we do registration," Stillwell said. "We're no longer confined to just collecting voter registration forms.”

The Civic Engagement Center will be passing out stamps for students who signed up to get absentee ballots Oct. 20 through Election Day, according to Stillwell.

This is not the first time that Central has helped students this election season. In February, the ASCWU-SGD and the college political clubs hosted a "mock caucus" that prepped Central students for the Washington state caucuses during the presidential primaries.

The College Democrats share a headquarters with the Kittitas County Democrats, located on Fifth and Pearl Street in Ellensburg. They will be meeting every Tuesday at 6 p.m. leading up to Election Day. The College Republicans meet Thursdays at 7 p.m. They share an office with the Kittitas County Republicans on Sixth and Main Street.

Meet the Central Presidential Finalists

Dr. Linda L. M. Bennett
Provost and vice president for Academic Affairs
University of Southern Indiana

Dr. James L. Gaudiano
Dean of the College of Communication and Information
Kent State

Dr. Aaron M. Podeseufsky
President
University of Central Missouri

Dr. Greg R. Weisensel
Provost and vice president for Academic Affairs
University of North Dakota

CWU Homecoming 2008
An Evening with
COLIN MOCHRIE
&
BRAD SHERWOOD
Full improv show with stars of “Whose Line Is It Anyway?”

Saturday, October 25
8 p.m., Student Union Ballroom

Tickets 509-963-1301
$15 CWU students | $25 general | $35 reserved
On sale at the Student Union Box Office

Full improv show with stars of “Whose Line Is It Anyway?”

Saturday, October 25
8 p.m., Student Union Ballroom

Tickets 509-963-1301
$15 CWU students | $25 general | $35 reserved
On sale at the Student Union Box Office

For disability accommodations, please call Campus Life at 509-963-1061 or (for hearing impaired) TDD 509-963-2143. CWU is an AA/EOE/Title IX Institution.
Online: missing major on campus leaves students asking questions

continued from page 2

ciate professor of journalism. "I can't imagine a student in this department graduating without some kind of online experience. It's something that's no longer just attractive on your résumé. It's essential on your résumé."

Dr. Roy Savoian, dean of the College of Business and professor of economics, said that the need for students in business to have Web experience which pertains to their degrees is obvious.

"The Internet is very important in students' lives, both in school and after graduation. Why don't universities such as Central have a stand-alone program which pertains to their degrees is obvious."

The need for Web experience is especially important for majors that have a lot of necessary pieces in order for students to stay ahead of the curve. Wahle discussed how some students, as recently as last year who took Information Technology 248, never even uploaded a Web page to the Internet in order to be able to have that knowledge. Also, once students decide to expand their Web background, they find that these classes are buried in other programs with certain specializations that do not apply to the needs of many students who are pursuing other majors. In order to take these classes, students either have to take them as electives, which cut up valuable credits, or they are prevented from taking some upper-level Web classes because they are not a part of that particular program and they do not have the prerequisites.

Next week, this story will address programs and ask administrators whether Central is addressing these issues. Do they believe the current setup is best or could changes be made? Is the software taught at Central the best

The problem with this, however, at least in the present state of course development, lies in the fact that these classes can be lacking, and do not always cover a lot of necessary pieces in order for students to stay ahead of the curve. Wahle discussed how some students, as recently as last year who took Information Technology 248, never even uploaded a Web page to the Internet in order to be able to have that knowledge. Also, once students decide to expand their Web background, they find that these classes are buried in other programs with certain specializations that do not apply to the needs of many students who are pursuing other majors. In order to take these classes, students either have to take them as electives, which cut up valuable credits, or they are prevented from taking some upper-level Web classes because they are not a part of that particular program and they do not have the prerequisites.

Next week, this story will address programs and ask administrators whether Central is addressing these issues. Do they believe the current setup is best or could changes be made? Is the software taught at Central the best.

Many universities, including Central, do not offer Web education as stand-alone majors or minors. With universities emphasizing classes being integrated within existing programs, the question has been asked if this is the best way.

Domestic Abuse combated with workshop. Awareness

by Sam Hastings
Staff reporter

October is Domestic Violence Awareness Month (DVAM) and this year Central Washington University's Center for Student Empowerment will be acknowledging this occasion by hosting several events to educate students about domestic violence.

Stephanie Sype, junior public relations major, is the event programmer for DVAM and is organizing all activities.

"Our goal is to bring awareness to the community about how many people are affected by domestic violence ... and provide information about places to go on campus for those who need help," Sype said.

At noon on Oct. 30 there will be a DVAM panel meeting in the Student Union and Recreation Center (SURC) Pit and the panel will be open to everyone.

The panel will include campus police officer Brian Melton, Detective and Criminal Violence educator Cameron Clasen, Kittitas County Prosecutor Greg Zempel, nurse Pam Clemons, Andrea Easlick from the Wellness Center and Leslie Strawn from Abuse Support and Prevention Education Now (ASPEN). These members of the panel will make up this round-robin-style of discussion on domestic violence.

Members of the community, as well as students and faculty of Central, are encouraged to attend and ask questions regarding this serious issue.

"Domestic violence is one of those issues that's talked about a lot, but it's an issue that's also in the closet a lot," Katrina Whitney, director of the Center for Student Empowerment, said. "Our goal is to get people talking about these issues that can be a challenge to confront and get an open dialogue going."

The Center has devised a way to get students talking by coming up with a T-shirt event during the last week of Octo-

They are asking student volunteers who know someone who has personally been affected by domestic violence in some way to wear shirts that say "Ask me why I'm silent." The goal of this event is to represent and confront and get an open dialogue going.

The goal of this event is to represent all the silent victims that make up the majority of domestic violence occurren-

The Center for Student Empowerment wants to encourage students who see the volunteers wearing these shirts to ask them any questions they have about domestic violence.

There will also be a Non-Violent Communication Workshop with Donna Kramer on Oct. 27 from 3 p.m. to 4 p.m. in the SURC.

For more information about DVAM, contact the Center for Student Empowerment by email at ecenter@cwu.edu, by phone at 509-963-2172 or in person at its office, room 230 in the SURC.

"Domestic violence is one of those issues that's talked about a lot, but it's an issue that's also in the closet a lot," Katrina Whitney, director of the Center for Student Empowerment, said. "Our goal is to get people talking about these issues that can be a challenge to confront and get an open dialogue going."

KATRINA WHITNEY, CENTER FOR STUDENT EMPOWERMENT DIRECTOR

GREAT FUNDRAISER FOR STUDENT CLUBS AND ORGANIZATIONS!

WareFair

Dec. 4, 5 & 6, 2008
CWU Student Union

DISCOUNTED BOOT FEES
FOR CWU STUDENTS, CLUBS AND ORGANIZATIONS!

Contact Venessa today in SURC 274, call 963-3315 or e-mail warefair@cwu.edu

CENTRAL WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY
After 22 years on the Ellensburg Police Department, Captain Ross Green spends his last day in blue patrolling the city. Green will be missed by other EPD officers.

Green: looking forward to spending time with son

Ellensburg weather

Today: High: 65°F Low: 57°F 0% chance of precipitation
Sunny

Tomorrow: High: 65°F Low: 59°F 0% chance of precipitation
Partly cloudy

Saturday: High: 66°F Low: 58°F 10% chance of precipitation
Partly cloudy

Sunday: High: 67°F Low: 59°F 10% chance of precipitation
Sunny

Monday: High: 64°F Low: 37°F 0% chance of precipitation
Sunny

Tuesday: High: 65°F Low: 56°F 0% chance of precipitation
Partly cloudy

Wednesday: High: 61°F Low: 52°F 0% chance of precipitation
Mostly cloudy

KARAOKE
Friday and Saturday Night
Registration begins at 9:00pm
Karaqoe starts at 9:30pm
Karaoke in the lounge
Contest winner receives free Cattleman’s T-Shirt

EPD gears up for Halloween

by Allie Mathis and Quinn Eddy
Staff Reporter

As Central Washington University students prepare for a Halloween that lands on the weekend, the Ellensburg Police Department (EPD) prepares for what will inevitably be a wild night.

"Halloween is a much bigger event if it falls on a weekend," said Captain Dan Hansberry of the EPD. "Big parties get out of control, and our hope is that people will have smaller parties and be as responsible as they can be."

Between 7 p.m. and 7 a.m. of last year's Wednesday Halloween, there were two DUIs, seven noise violations and six other alcohol-related arrests. This is nothing compared with what is expected next Friday.

"We aren't even going to bother having a party this year," said junior emergency medical technician (EMT) major Phil Downey. "We don't want to deal with getting another noise violation and having to pay for it."

EPD alcohol enforcement patrols will hit the town at 9 p.m. next Friday. Officers will be especially on the lookout for houses with too much noise. Noise violations are a common occurrence in Ellensburg, and many people have already started to take this into consideration for their plans on Halloween night.

"We are even going to bother having a party this year," said junior emergency medical technician (EMT) major Phil Downey. "We don't want to deal with getting another noise violation and agree with me when I say he’s freakishly insightful and is not afraid to tell people how they can improve themselves," Coppin said.

Everyone at the station is in agreement that he will be missed. His achievements in the department and his contribution to the community will reverberate through Ellensburg for decades to come.

During retirement Green plans on hunting frequently with his son, who is an officer with Kittitas County. He also looks forward to spending more time with his three motorcycles.
Initiative 985 will not help traffic congestion

Elliensburg experience a memorable adventure

As I spend the next couple of months preparing for graduation I have been reflecting on my time at Central Washington University. Spending my entire life on the west side of the Cascades I was unprepared for the raw expediency of the lifestyle of rural eastern Washington, more specifically Ellensburg.

At first, the not-so-distant sound of cows mooing disturbed me as I came to and from my apartment because I grew up in an "urban" environment. Now I have become so accustomed to it that if I did not hear those comforting moos on a daily basis, something would be out of place.

My first winter in Ellensburg I saw a snow-plow-like contraption attached to the front of a car. I was first surprised that this car had enough power, weight and traction to plow snow. Secondly, I was amazed not only by the invocation of this person, but by his charitable spin. Where I from, the city Department of Transportation does not plow the roads but instead spreads large amounts of sand over the roads in hopes that people don't need to leave their homes for fear of being stranded.

Another bit of information I gathered is that it is not out of the ordinary for a competing rodeo team at the university or to hold lassoing contests at school events as I witnessed at a bonfire event.

The more time I spent in Ellensburg the more I became aware that Carhart clothing and cowboy boots are acceptable attire for all occasions. Further more, I have come to realize that eastern Washington is one of the few places in the country where cowboy boots and hats will always be in style.

I have also come to recognize that this town is very proud to be known as the "Rodeo City" and it is such a big deal that there are even appointed Rodeo Queens who have signed portraits hanging in local restaurants. As I read around a license plate frame that "The Ellens­burg experience" and "Texas has a great show on dirt." This observation becomes more clear.

My overall experience in Ellensburg has been eye-opening in more than an academic manner. I now possess many great stories to share about my time spent on the east side.

Eric Haugland
Sports editor

Where did all the gentleman go?

Recently I read an old article from Esquire I found on the internet titled "The 75 Skills Every Man Should Master." It is part funny, part serious and entirely true containing a list of proficiencies that every modern man should carry in his repertoire. Ranging from being able to shuffle a deck of cards to being able to put on a suit and tie, every woman wishes a man could do - ask for help.

After reading the article I was quite proud of myself that at the age of 23, I was comfortable with at least 40 on the list, and with practice would be able to hammer down at least half a dozen more in the next year if I choose to - but really I got me thinking.

My father, who has 40 years on me, probably wouldn't have had a problem successfully completing at least 70 on the list. I can only imagine he probably could have done well by 75 by the age of 18. In this regard, I started to get a little concerned for men these days are losing their edge.

I hate to play stereotypes, but the manly mustache, fedora-wearing gentelman has ceased; the fedora-wearing gentelman has ceased; the laced-up cowboy boots and hats are out.

I have come to recognize that this town is very proud to be known as the "Rodeo City" and it is such a big deal that there are even appointed Rodeo Queens who have signed portraits hanging in local restaurants. As I read around a license plate frame that "The Ellens­burg experience" and "Texas has a great show on dirt." This observation becomes more clear.

My overall experience in Ellensburg has been eye-opening in more than an academic manner. I now possess many great stories to share about my time spent on the east side.

Eric Haugland
Sports editor

Letters Policy

The Observer welcomes brief letters (200 words or fewer) from readers on current issues. Letters must include the author's full name and Central Washington University affiliation: year and major for students, department for faculty and staff or degree and year graduated for alumni.

The Observer will not publish letters that respond to previous letters unless they offer meaningful additions to the topic. All letters become property of The Observer and may be edited for length, style, spelling, grammar, taste and reader interest.

Letters may be e-mailed to cwoobserver@gmail.com.
Central swings first campus-wide dance in 20 years

by Megan O'Malley
Staff reporter

The traditional homecoming of the school year has been immortalized in both movie and song. Homecoming brings people together.

Central has its longstanding homecoming traditions such as "Wellington's Wildlife" and the classic football game, but this year, for the first time in more than 20 years, Central is holding an all-school homecoming dance. The dance has shifted over the years to a school-wide event, as opposed to strictly the residence hall affair it has been in years past. The dance will be held from 8 p.m. to midnight on Friday, Oct. 24, in the Student Union and Recreation Center (SUR) Ballroom.

Four major influences on campus - the Residence Hall Association (RHA), the Board of Directors (BOD), the "Burg" and Campus Activities - are hoping to make this year's dance better than ever. In addition to the all-school participation, the cost of dancing will be lowered to $3 for students and $5 for non-students. Tickets for the dance are $5 and they are available both at the box office and at the door.

This year's homecoming theme is "Red and Black Attack: Dress for Success," but don't think that tuxes and formal wear are the only way to go. "We're not going to discriminate if you show up in sweats," Sarah Grant, student program coordinator for Campus Activities, said. "But it is an excuse to dress up!"

All those involved have promised that this dance will be bigger than ever. "We hope that the dance will bring students closer together," Lafond said. "It's a way to show you're proud of your school and you get to show what your pride is all about," Lafond said.

Hoping to instill the school with more Wildcat spirit, this dance will have all the traditional homecoming staples. Photographers Riley LaMie and Gabrielle Stilwater will snap some homecoming shots for $5. The humble mascot, Wellington, will also don his finest tux just for the occasion.

All those involved have promised that this dance will be bigger than ever. "We're not going to discriminate if you show up in sweats," Sarah Grant, student program coordinator for Campus Activities, said. "But it is an excuse to dress up!"

Four major influences on campus - the Residence Hall Association (RHA), the Board of Directors (BOD), the "Burg" and Campus Activities - are hoping to make this year's dance better than ever. In addition to the all-school participation, the cost of dancing will be lowered to $3 for students and $5 for non-students. Tickets for the dance are $5 and they are available both at the box office and at the door.

This year's homecoming theme is "Red and Black Attack: Dress for Success," but don't think that tuxes and formal wear are the only way to go. "We're not going to discriminate if you show up in sweats," Sarah Grant, student program coordinator for Campus Activities, said. "But it is an excuse to dress up!"

All those involved have promised that this dance will be bigger than ever. "We hope that the dance will bring students closer together," Lafond said. "It's a way to show you're proud of your school and you get to show what your pride is all about," Lafond said.

Hoping to instill the school with more Wildcat spirit, this dance will have all the traditional homecoming staples. Photographers Riley LaMie and Gabrielle Stilwater will snap some homecoming shots for $5. The humble mascot, Wellington, will also don his finest tux just for the occasion.

All those involved have promised that this dance will be bigger than ever. "We're not going to discriminate if you show up in sweats," Sarah Grant, student program coordinator for Campus Activities, said. "But it is an excuse to dress up!"

Four major influences on campus - the Residence Hall Association (RHA), the Board of Directors (BOD), the "Burg" and Campus Activities - are hoping to make this year's dance better than ever. In addition to the all-school participation, the cost of dancing will be lowered to $3 for students and $5 for non-students. Tickets for the dance are $5 and they are available both at the box office and at the door.

This year's homecoming theme is "Red and Black Attack: Dress for Success," but don't think that tuxes and formal wear are the only way to go. "We're not going to discriminate if you show up in sweats," Sarah Grant, student program coordinator for Campus Activities, said. "But it is an excuse to dress up!"

All those involved have promised that this dance will be bigger than ever. "We hope that the dance will bring students closer together," Lafond said. "It's a way to show you're proud of your school and you get to show what your pride is all about," Lafond said.

Hoping to instill the school with more Wildcat spirit, this dance will have all the traditional homecoming staples. Photographers Riley LaMie and Gabrielle Stilwater will snap some homecoming shots for $5. The humble mascot, Wellington, will also don his finest tux just for the occasion.

All those involved have promised that this dance will be bigger than ever. "We're not going to discriminate if you show up in sweats," Sarah Grant, student program coordinator for Campus Activities, said. "But it is an excuse to dress up!"

Four major influences on campus - the Residence Hall Association (RHA), the Board of Directors (BOD), the "Burg" and Campus Activities - are hoping to make this year's dance better than ever. In addition to the all-school participation, the cost of dancing will be lowered to $3 for students and $5 for non-students. Tickets for the dance are $5 and they are available both at the box office and at the door.

This year's homecoming theme is "Red and Black Attack: Dress for Success," but don't think that tuxes and formal wear are the only way to go. "We're not going to discriminate if you show up in sweats," Sarah Grant, student program coordinator for Campus Activities, said. "But it is an excuse to dress up!"

All those involved have promised that this dance will be bigger than ever. "We hope that the dance will bring students closer together," Lafond said. "It's a way to show you're proud of your school and you get to show what your pride is all about," Lafond said.

Hoping to instill the school with more Wildcat spirit, this dance will have all the traditional homecoming staples. Photographers Riley LaMie and Gabrielle Stilwater will snap some homecoming shots for $5. The humble mascot, Wellington, will also don his finest tux just for the occasion.

All those involved have promised that this dance will be bigger than ever. "We're not going to discriminate if you show up in sweats," Sarah Grant, student program coordinator for Campus Activities, said. "But it is an excuse to dress up!"

Four major influences on campus - the Residence Hall Association (RHA), the Board of Directors (BOD), the "Burg" and Campus Activities - are hoping to make this year's dance better than ever. In addition to the all-school participation, the cost of dancing will be lowered to $3 for students and $5 for non-students. Tickets for the dance are $5 and they are available both at the box office and at the door.

This year's homecoming theme is "Red and Black Attack: Dress for Success," but don't think that tuxes and formal wear are the only way to go. "We're not going to discriminate if you show up in sweats," Sarah Grant, student program coordinator for Campus Activities, said. "But it is an excuse to dress up!"

All those involved have promised that this dance will be bigger than ever. "We hope that the dance will bring students closer together," Lafond said. "It's a way to show you're proud of your school and you get to show what your pride is all about," Lafond said.

Hoping to instill the school with more Wildcat spirit, this dance will have all the traditional homecoming staples. Photographers Riley LaMie and Gabrielle Stilwater will snap some homecoming shots for $5. The humble mascot, Wellington, will also don his finest tux just for the occasion.

All those involved have promised that this dance will be bigger than ever. "We're not going to discriminate if you show up in sweats," Sarah Grant, student program coordinator for Campus Activities, said. "But it is an excuse to dress up!"
Comedians Colin Mochrie and Brad Sherwood share the stage

by Brooke Mortensen
Staff reporter

Some people feel that it’s destiny to be brought together with another person. Some say opposites attract. Colin Mochrie and Brad Sherwood believe in luck and just fate.

“I felt sorry for him because he doesn’t get out of the house much,” Sherwood said. “He would just be sitting in his garden. It was a mercy thing.”

After filming the TV show “Whose Line Is It Anyway?” with Drew Carey and doing improv with a large group in Las Vegas, Mochrie and Sherwood decided to go on the road as “An Evening with Colin Mochrie and Brad Sherwood.” Their act will be brought to Central Washington University for the homecoming show at 8 p.m. on Oct. 25 in the Student Union and Recreation Center Ballroom.

“Oh, I felt sorry for him,” Mochrie said. “I read a sketch if it would interest me in doing a two-man improv and I said yeah. It turned out to be great.”

Looking aside, Mochrie and Sherwood said they have both been into comedy since childhood and found it in a serious way.

“I was a leaser, but more outgoing because I was always moving and always trying to make friends by making people laugh,” Sherwood said. “Some kids get into dinosaurs, I got into comedy.”

Mochrie also traveled frequently as a child, but instead of intending to get into comedy as Sherwood did, he sort of ended up that way.

“I was very shy and a bit of a bookworm, so one day a friend of mine dared me to try out for the school play,” Mochrie said. “It was there that I got my first laugh and that became the defining point for me — I got into comedy.”

He has worked on TV shows such as “Whose Line Is It Anyway?,” “Drew Carey’s Green Screen Show,” the Canadian version of “Are You Smarter than a Fifth Grader?” and “Getting along Euxously.” He has also been in the movies “Surviving My Mother,” “Young Frigido” and “Expecting.”

“Usually if someone asks me to work on something, I say yes,” Mochrie said. “The series work I’ve done is through friends; I’ve been very fortunate to have friends hire me.”

Even with his involvement in TV and movies, Mochrie has always made it a point to be a family man with his wife Debra and son Luke.

“We are celebrating our 20th anniversary in January,” Mochrie said. “We made it work because wherever one of us was busy, the other would step in and help with the family.”

He is also hard at work on upcoming TV shows, including “The Adventures of Bob and Doug McKenzie,” which is an animated series. For the show, airing in Canada, Mochrie will voice the character of Rupert. “The Mochrie Show,” an improv series, is another project in the works.

His upcoming movies are “Gravy Train,” where Mochrie will play a neurotic mayor named Chester; “Puck Hogs,” which follows a men’s recreational hockey team; and “Those Guys,” a buddy comedy where two friends are being chased by the police after getting into a diamond smuggling scheme.

Sherwood also has projects in the works, but prefers to keep them under wraps.

“I am working on stuff, but have to keep it top secret because I’m superstitious and am usually not supposed to talk about it until it’s on the air,” Sherwood said.

Sherwood went to Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio, where he got his bachelor’s degree in acting. His work includes “Whose Line Is It Anyway?,” “The Drew Carey Show,” “Drew Carey’s Green Screen Show,” “L.A. Law,” “Talk Soup” and “The New Dating Game.”

Sherwood says he has had many influences for his work, such as “Monty Python,” Art Carney, Don Knotts, Tim Conway and the early Saturday Night Live.”

“For me though, it’s just like musicians that tend to have influences that they grow up listening to,” Sherwood said.

“Although both Mochrie and Sherwood have made a career out of being funny, they both agree: It’s not an easy gig.”

“You gotta stick with it and learn how to make people laugh,” Sherwood said. “It takes a long time because you have to learn what is funny.”

“An Evening with Colin Mochrie and Brad Sherwood” is an improv show based on audience suggestions. Many random audience members get brought onto the stage, which makes the show different every time.

Mochrie and Sherwood play a wide variety of theater sports-style games, including “Weapons of Mouse Destruction,” involving 100 mouse traps on the stage.

“I’ve heard really good things about these guys,” Scott Drummond, director of Campus Activities, said. “They fit what we are doing for the event and their improv takes their act in a different direction.”

Tickets are on sale at the Central Box Office. Student tickets are $15, general admission is $25 and reserved seating is $35.

“I would describe our show as one really, really funny guy and Colin,” Sherwood said.

Mochrie and Sherwood have been quoted according to telephone interviews with Mortensen.
"Max Payne" makes gamer blush in shame

When the video game "Max Payne" came out back in 2001 for the PC it was heralded by critics as one of the best action games to ever grace their presence. I played the game when it first hit the market and completely agreed with all the good reviews it was getting. With its hard-boiled noir feel and drop-dead gorgeous style, I also thought it would make a kick-ass movie.

Well, the time has finally arrived and "Max Payne" the movie has been released, but I can't go any further without telling you that this movie was horrible - absolutely horrible.

The story in "Max Payne" is simple: New York Police Department cop Max Payne comes home to find his wife and baby daughter brutally murdered by a clan full of junkies on a new drug called "Valkyr." This forces Payne to go undercover for the Drug Enforcement Agency to find the source of the steady supply of the drug. Carnage, gunfights and cover-ups ensue as Payne fights through the snowy city of New York. Sounds good, doesn't it?

Well, the movie version drifts off this track and introduces brand new concepts to the storyline. These include ludicrous ideas such as angel-versus-demon fights, a heavy emphasis on Norse mythology and half-assed religious tones.

Now, to be fair, there are some elements from the game version of "Max Payne" that made it into "Max Payne" the movie. However, the homage paid is so miniscule it takes a pretty dedicated fanboy to notice these little things. Characters such as Police Chief Jim Bravura, Mona Sax and B.B. all have roles in the film. Although the inclusion of some classic "Max Payne" characters is nice, their names are nearly the only connection to the characters in the game. For example, in the game, Bravura is an old, white man with a mustache. In the film, Bravura is played by rapper Ludacris.

Even though the film version of "Max Payne" doesn't match up to its video game counterpart, it is not necessarily a bad movie. However, the critique goes far beyond the lack of relation to the video game.

Absolutely every portion of the acting is downright poor in this movie. Any viewer can tell that Mark Wahlberg, easily the most accomplished actor in the movie, couldn't give a rip about the film itself and it shows through his hokey performance. I have to admit, it was kind of fun to see Chris O'Donnell as Jason Colvin back in the acting saddle after so many years away.

On the other hand, for some odd reason, O'Donnell looks brain dead and as though he has been crying in nearly every scene. It honestly seems like O'Donnell doesn't have a clue as to what scene he is actually doing or even what movie he is in.

I have no idea what happened in production, but the scenes were extremely disturbing to say the least. "Max Payne" had plenty of potential, especially for devoted fans of the game, to be an excellent movie. However, like many, it not all video game movies, something happened between concept and production that made the end result turn into something atrociously bad.

THE SCOOP

October 24-30

24. "Such is Life" by Range Films 6:30 p.m. at The River

27. Lilly's "Hollywood Nights" 10 p.m. at Lilly's Cantina

25. "An Evening with Colin Mochrie and Brad Sherwood" 8 p.m. in the SURC Ballroom

28. 24 Hour Theatre Performance 7 p.m. at Hertz Auditorium

29. Jennifer Pozner 6 p.m. in the SURC Theater

THE SCOOP

THURSDAY

OCTOBER 23

6 p.m.-8 p.m. Community Fields at 18th & Alder St.

WELLINGTON'S WILDFIRE AND CHALLENGE COURSE

CWU Student Rally and Challenge Course grand opening!

Come get some free food, listen to music from 88.1 The Burg, and test your skills on CWU's new high-ropes course.

FRIDAY

OCTOBER 24

6 p.m., Sue Lombard Dining Room

ALUMNI AWARDS BANQUET

9 p.m.-midnight, SURC Ballroom

ALL-CAMPUS HOMECOMING DANCE

$5 admission, university ID required

SUNDAY

OCTOBER 25

9 a.m. start, Nicholson Pavilion

HOMECOMING 5K FUN RUN

11:55 a.m., SURC West Patio

PEP RALLY

Marching Band and Color Guard lead fans up to Wildcat Alley.

11 a.m.-1 p.m.

Walnut & Nicholson Blvd

outside Tomlinson Stadium

WILDCAT ALLEY

Join the festivities at CWU's first Homecoming street fair with food, music, activities, car bash, contests and more!

11 a.m., Soccer fields

CWU WOMEN'S SOCCER VS. SPU

1 p.m., Tomlinson Field

CWU FOOTBALL VS. WESTERN OREGON

8 p.m., SURC Ballroom

AN EVENING WITH COLIN MOCHRIE AND BRAD SHERWOOD

Don't miss improv comedy with two stars from "Whose Line Is It Anyway?"

Tickets: (509) 963-1301
Wellington’s Wildfire sparks homecoming week

by Matthew Hartmann
Staff reporter

The flames from the bonfire will rise up into the sky as Wellington gets students ready for the homecoming weekend with tales of victory to come.

The fourth-annual Wellington’s Wildfire will be held tonight from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. at the community fields on the corner of 18th and Alder Street. Wellington’s Wildfire is an annual event aimed at getting students at Central Washington University ready for the weekend homecoming events.

The event is an opportunity for the Associated Students of Central Washington University-Board of Directors (ASCWU-BOD) and 88.1 the ‘Burg to meet students and community members. It is also a chance for various Central clubs to attract potential members and become more recognized by the larger community.

Program Director Nicholas Songyangmatar offers a student, said that the ‘Burg will be playing music and giving out prizes as part of a year-long promotional campaign aimed at showing the student body that the ‘Burg is the radio station of Central.

“It’s really something to ignite the homecoming weekend and get it going,” Songyangmatar said.

The ASCWU-BOD will be offering various food and refreshments including hot dogs, hamburgers and garden burgers followed by a speech by a yet-to-be-announced athletic speaker.

“Wellington’s Wildfire is an opportunity for students, faculty, staff and administration to get together and get riled up for the homecoming football game,” said ASCWU-BOD Executive Vice President Brent Weisel, senior accounting major.

Wellington’s Wildfire is being held in correlation with the grand opening of the new challenge course, which features various group bonding activities and an extensive ropes course.

According to Ryan Hopkins, director of Outdoor Pursuits and Rentals, the challenge course was designed to allow students to develop their leadership and communication skills.

“Although the challenge course has been in operation since last summer, it marks its official unveiling to the general public.

“It’s going to be a great event that will allow students who haven’t had the opportunity to do the course yet to do so,” Hopkins said.

Aside from Wellington’s Wildfire and the homecoming game, there are many other events happening this week.

Saturday morning’s Wildcat Alley was added to the line-up for the first time this year and features local businesses and organizations in a street fair outside Tomlinson Stadium. Between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m., booths lining Walnut Street will feature face and body painting, give food and merchandise samples and free prizes.

In connection to Wildcat Alley, Rally to the Alley will take place outside of Student Union and Recreation Center at noon on Saturday.

At the top of the hour, the Central marching band will gather students in a pep rally through campus before leading everyone to Wildcat Alley and the football game.

Dr. Wayne Quirk, provost and senior vice president for Academic Affairs, said that events like Wellington’s Wildfire are a chance for students and alumni to connect and that becoming involved opens more opportunities for students.

“When students get involved in extra-curricular activities, they’re more successful at Central,” Quirk said.

For more information about the Wildfire please contact the ASCWU.

Kid Cat Zone opens for Pozner’s lecture

by Hayley Clayton
Staff reporter

While Wildcat parents attend Jennifer Pozner’s presentation Oct. 29 in the Student Union and Recreation Center (SURC), the Kid Cat Zone (KCZ) invites their kittens to come and play.

The KCZ is a children’s activity zone that will provide childcare for non-traditional students of Central Washington University who otherwise might not be able to attend the presentation, which is a requirement for many classes.

The zone is free for Central students and it will be open in rooms 201 and 202 of the SURC at 5:30 p.m., in time for the 6 p.m. Pozner presentation.

“The best part about it is non-trads can bring their kids to an activity zone where the kids are safe while [parents] watch the speaker,” said Kristal Whittaker, senior special education major and Civic Engagement Center liaison.

“The don’t have to worry about finding a babysitter or keeping their children quiet and they’re right across the hall.”

The Center for Student Empowerment and the Civic Engagement Center sponsor the KCZ.

The Center for Student Empowerment registers children for the KCZ.

Kids and parents will receive bracelets to identify them with each other. The KCZ is for children ages 3 to 10. Children must either be potty-trained or able to attend the presentation, which is free for Central students.

The activity zone’s theme will be the presidential elections. Wee Wildcats will have the opportunity to decorate 3-D stars using precut construction paper. The kids will also be making star wreaths by gluing stars to paper plates and Lincoln penny pendants by gluing pennies to the center of paper stars.

The Center for Student Empowerment and the Civic Engagement Center brought the KCZ to Central based on its positive reputation at other universities and its success at the Wangari Maathai presentation last year.

The Maathai presentation was the first non-sporting event to offer the KCZ.

The zone was first introduced winter quarter 2008 for basketball games.

“The Kid Cat Zone was very well-attended [at the Maathai presentation] so we thought we’d bring it again,” said Lisa Fields, sophomore business administration major and event programmer for the Center for Student Empowerment.

The Center for Student Empowerment’s goal for the KCZ is to make it available weekly, enabling parents to enjoy the Recreation Center and other campus activities.

In a survey of traditional-students conducted by the Center for Student Empowerment, parents responded positively to increased availability of the KCZ and its success at the Wangari Maathai presentation.

“The Maathai presentation was the first non-sporting event to offer the KCZ. We’re working on that to see if that’s something that students would use and then we would have a set day and time to see what the turnout is and then based on that we could add more days if we need to,” Fields said. “I think [not having childcare for the Recreation Center] is a big complaint for non-trads because they pay for it but they don’t get to use it.”

The Center for Student Empowerment hopes to make the KCZ available for the Recreation Center by the end of fall quarter, according to Fields.

Currently, the Center for Student Empowerment is working on a KCZ icon. The icon will appear on posters and advertising for speaker events indicating to parents that the zone will be available.

In addition to the KCZ, the Empowerment Center has provided lactation centers, a family-friendly campus walk, high chairs in the dining room area and a family resource center.

Students interested in bringing their children to a child-care-registered event with the Center for Student Empowerment.

Interested volunteers can visit the Civic Engagement Center for more information.

Change the way you move with 1UP! Electric Bicycles. The ultimate transport/commute bike. Many styles now in stock at Old Mill Country Store.

Old Mill Country Store
500 W. 3rd Ave, Ellensburg, WA
509-925-5397 open 7 days a week

Old Mill Country Store
500 W. Third
Ellensburg, WA 98926
(509) 925-5397

It's really something to ignite homecoming weekend and get it going.”

NICHOLAS SONGSANGCHARNTARA
PROGRAM DIRECTOR

Although the challenge course has been in operation since last summer, it marks its official unveiling to the general public.

“Although the challenge course has been in operation since last summer, it marks its official unveiling to the general public.”

“It’s going to be a great event that will allow students who haven’t had the opportunity to do the course yet to do so,” Hopkins said.

Aside from Wellington’s Wildfire and the homecoming game, there are many other events happening this week.

Saturday morning’s Wildcat Alley was added to the line-up for the first time this year and features local businesses and organizations in a street fair outside Tomlinson Stadium. Between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m., booths lining Walnut Street will feature face and body painting, give food and merchandise samples and free prizes.

In connection to Wildcat Alley, Rally to the Alley will take place outside of Student Union and Recreation Center at noon on Saturday.

At the top of the hour, the Central marching band will gather students in a pep rally through campus before leading everyone to Wildcat Alley and the football game.

Dr. Wayne Quirk, provost and senior vice president for Academic Affairs, said that events like Wellington’s Wildfire are a chance for students and alumni to connect and that becoming involved opens more opportunities for students.

“When students get involved in extra-curricular activities, they’re more successful at Central,” Quirk said.

For more information about the Wildfire please contact the ASCWU.
Foot bagger excels while hiding in the shadows

by Laura Mittfelder

Staff reporter

Central Washington University is home to thousands of students including one very talented foot bagger.

Foot bagging is a form of hacky sack, but is more intense and involves only one person instead of a group of people.

Portland native Jacob Wren is a well rounded athlete. He played soccer for nine years and also participated in wrestling, track and martial arts.

"I was looking for the hardest sport I could find," Wren said.

Looking for a sport with no limits is an all around challenge: mentally and physically.

"I was looking for the hardest sport I could find," Wren said.

Looking for a sport with no limits is an all around challenge: mentally and physically. Wren only started traveling with his foot bagging team about two years ago and is going to all sorts of different areas. Wren goes to competitions in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, California and Canada.

This past summer Wren went to a competition called "Worlds," which was located in Prague.

There is not much money in it yet just because it's not that popular here, but foot baggers can walk away with a few grand from time to time.

"I really enjoy the small community," Wren said.

Foot bagging is all about coming to competitions. Wren progressed to stalling the bag on his foot and found he enjoyed it quite a bit.

A person can improve their time but that's about it.

"You can only spar for so long in martial arts," Wren said.

There is no limit to what someone can do with their own creativity, Wren said. Foot bagging is all about coming up with moves and tricks that will get points in competitions.

Wren started kicking in high school and got the hang of it. He soon progressed to stalling the bag on his foot and found he enjoyed it quite a bit.

It takes a long time to get to Wren's level. The hard work and dedication is more than what some people are willing to put into it.

Wren can be seen almost daily out and around campus, foot bagging between classes.

Wren joined a team in Portland and started foot-bagging with them. The team travels and goes to all sorts of competitions.

Wren only started traveling with his team about two years ago and is going to all sorts of different areas. Wren goes to competitions in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, California and Canada.

Since it is such a humble community, when it comes to finding a place to stay, foot baggers often stay with fellow foot baggers at their homes and just split the cost.

When it comes down to food there are often sponsors or a competition fee, which could be anywhere from $50 to $100.

Competitions have two parts to them. There is a 30 second shred where the foot bagger shows off all his or her best moves.

SEE FOOT-BAGGING PAGE 2

Students: Juggling more than school work

by Laura Mittfelder

Staff reporter

College is a place for diversity, students have different interests and skills of all sorts, some more unique than others.

Two guys at Central Washington University that have been spotted numerous times around campus excel at juggling.

"My Uncle got me into it," freshman undeclared Jesse Vonier said.

Vonier spends his spare time on a nice day juggling. Throwing one ball after another into the air and catching it with great skill and dedication.

Juggling takes hand-eye coordination and a lot of practice.

Vonier started out with just three round balls. Once he became skilled at those his uncle bought him juggling pins, and he has been working on mastering those. These look just like bowling pins but are made specifically for juggling.

"It relaxes me," Vonier said. "It sets your mind and you're not aware of anything else." Vonier said.

Vonier has been at CWU for one year and is continuing to improve on his juggling skills whenever he gets the chance.

Rowe is in doing the same thing. He wants to learn to idle on a unicycle and then play the star spangled banner on his harmonica and guitar at the same time.

Some different things these two can juggle are things such as a Chinese yo-yo, cigar boxes, balls, and pins and ever fire.

Rowe is also practicing balancing on a tight rope, which is also called slacklining.

It's all about the hand-eye coordination and keeping skills sharp. It is almost like riding a bike, once you learn the basics they are with you forever.

"Your creativity is your only limit."

SENIOR PHYSICAL EDUCATION

MARCIA ROWE

Juggling may not be the first thing a person might think of when athletics comes to mind. However, this hobby requires long hours of practice to attain a high skill level.

Senior physical education major, Micah Rowe also juggles.

"Your creativity is your only limit," Rowe said.

According to Rowe it's a form of creative athleticism. People aren't limited to just one thing. It's anything you can do.

"It's kind of crazy," Vonier said.

Rowe would like to be a physical education teacher and teach kids about confidence through juggling. According to Rowe it's a form of creative athleticism. People aren't limited to just one thing. It's anything you can do.

"It's kind of crazy," Vonier said.

According to Rowe the Juggling Club was just recently cancelled but he is trying to start one back up again with a few minor changes.

It is not strictly juggling. Break dancing, juggling, hacky sack and similar pastimes are welcome to join in and just go have a good time.

"It's a great way to meet people. It's how I met Micah," Vonier said.

"It's a great way to meet people. It's how I met Micah," Vonier said.

Rowe is continuing to improve on his juggling skills whenever he gets the chance.

Rowe is in doing the same thing. He wants to learn to idle on a unicycle and then play the star spangled banner on his harmonica and guitar at the same time.

Some different things these two can juggle are things such as a Chinese yo-yo, cigar boxes, balls, and pins and ever fire.

Rowe is also practicing balancing on a tight rope, which is also called slacklining.

"It's all about the hand-eye coordination and keeping skills sharp. It is almost like riding a bike, once you learn the basics they are with you forever.
By Tristan Corringle
Staff reporter

At the Redwood Bowl in Arcata, Calif. Central Washington University had a 20 point victory over host Humboldt State University. The Wildcats beat the Lumberjack with a score of 34-14 Saturday night, Oct. 18.

Central's record has now extended to 6-0 in Great Northwest Athletic Conference. Division II games and 7-1 overall. Humboldt, whose record has now fallen to 2-6 overall, still remains winless with a record of 0-5 in conference play.

The Wildcats entered this week's game ranked 11th in the AFCA Division II national poll and fifth in the NCAA regional poll.

With this win over the Lumberjack the Wildcats have clinched a tying spot for the GNAC football championship with two league games still remaining to play.

With the Wildcats' offense only totaling 339 yards for the night, senior quarterback Mike Reilly tied Jon Kitna's school record of 911 career pass completions when Reilly threw for 275 yards and two touchdowns.

Rogers.

Mike Wailer with 9:10 remaining in the first quarter giving the Wildcats a 7-0 lead against the Lumberjack.

However the Wildcats were unable to capitalize on Rogers 46-yard pick return on the next series as Garrett Roloma's 39-yard field goal attempt missed when it sailed right, keeping the score 7-0.

With twenty six remaining in the first quarter, the Wildcats scored again when junior Morris made his way to the end zone on a 10-yard carry to give the Wildcats a 14-0 lead to round out the first quarter.

Late in the second quarter Humboldt State cut the Wildcats lead in half when a 13-play, 60-yard drive was capped by a 14-yard halfback pass from Bobby Thomas to Devin Stearns on a ball that was deflected in the end zone by Wildcats' defense before making it into Stearns' hands.

The Wildcats took a 21-7 lead after Reilly took advantage of their field position when he connected with freshman Jamal Weems on a seven-yard touchdown pass going into halftime.

In the third quarter the Wildcats put the game out of reach for the Lumberjack when Central's offense totaled 10 points.

The Wildcats defense did their part by holding the Lumberjack to a mere 14 offensive yards and 12 total plays for the third quarter.

On Central's second possession of the half, Roloma made a 24-yard field goal making it a 24-7 Wildcat lead then Reilly made it a 31-7 Wildcat lead with a run on a one-yard touchdown which was only his second of the season.

With seven minutes left in the final quarter, Roloma sealed the deal for the Wildcats by adding three more points to the score board with a 28-yard field goal giving Central their final score of 34 making it a 27-point lead for the Wildcats.

Roloma's two field goals of the game it also allowed him to become the first player in Central's history to have a perfect field goal campaign. With 2:29 remaining, the Lumberjack closed out the game by scoring on a 19-yard pass from Garrett Hubrich to Matt Devlin. Humboldt State came in third in the GNAC third and final offensive strike of the series and of the game making the final score 34-14.

Hubrich completed the game with 162 yards completing 13 of 14 passes in the first half and finishing the game with 26 of 35 attempted passes.

"I'm excited for our homecoming game, if we execute the game correctly we should win," said Rogers.

The Wildcats will return home to host Western Oregon on Saturday Oct. 25 for Central's annual homecoming game at Tomlinson Stadium. Kickoff is at 1 p.m. This will be the second to last home game for the Wildcats as they have three more regular season games left.

Lady Wildcats extend streak
by Alex Pynsky
Staff Reporter

The girl's soccer team extended their winning streak to three games with a win over Saint Martins University on Oct. 16 and a tie with Western Oregon University on Oct. 18. Central Washington University improved to 7-4-3 overall and 5-4-3 in the GNAC conference.

Great defense by the Wildcats was the key to the team's overall success.

With 2:29 remaining, the Lumberjack closed out the game by scoring on a 19-yard pass from Garrett Hubrich to Matt Devlin. Humboldt State came in third in the GNAC third and final offensive strike of the series and of the game making the final score 34-14.

Hubrich completed the game with 162 yards completing 13 of 14 passes in the first half and finishing the game with 26 of 35 attempted passes.

"I'm excited for our homecoming game, if we execute the game correctly we should win," said Rogers.

The Wildcats will return home to host Western Oregon on Saturday Oct. 25 for Central's annual homecoming game at Tomlinson Stadium. Kickoff is at 1 p.m. This will be the second to last home game for the Wildcats as they have three more regular season games left.

by Alex Pynsky
Staff Reporter

The girl's soccer team extended their winning streak to three games with a win over Saint Martins University on Oct. 16 and a tie with Western Oregon University on Oct. 18. Central Washington University improved to 7-4-3 overall and 5-4-3 in the GNAC conference.

Great defense by the Wildcats was the key to the team's overall success.

With 2:29 remaining, the Lumberjack closed out the game by scoring on a 19-yard pass from Garrett Hubrich to Matt Devlin. Humboldt State came in third in the GNAC third and final offensive strike of the series and of the game making the final score 34-14.

Hubrich completed the game with 162 yards completing 13 of 14 passes in the first half and finishing the game with 26 of 35 attempted passes.

"I'm excited for our homecoming game, if we execute the game correctly we should win," said Rogers.

The Wildcats will return home to host Western Oregon on Saturday Oct. 25 for Central's annual homecoming game at Tomlinson Stadium. Kickoff is at 1 p.m. This will be the second to last home game for the Wildcats as they have three more regular season games left.

by Alex Pynsky
Staff Reporter

The girl's soccer team extended their winning streak to three games with a win over Saint Martins University on Oct. 16 and a tie with Western Oregon University on Oct. 18. Central Washington University improved to 7-4-3 overall and 5-4-3 in the GNAC conference.

Great defense by the Wildcats was the key to the team's overall success.

With 2:29 remaining, the Lumberjack closed out the game by scoring on a 19-yard pass from Garrett Hubrich to Matt Devlin. Humboldt State came in third in the GNAC third and final offensive strike of the series and of the game making the final score 34-14.

Hubrich completed the game with 162 yards completing 13 of 14 passes in the first half and finishing the game with 26 of 35 attempted passes.

"I'm excited for our homecoming game, if we execute the game correctly we should win," said Rogers.

The Wildcats will return home to host Western Oregon on Saturday Oct. 25 for Central's annual homecoming game at Tomlinson Stadium. Kickoff is at 1 p.m. This will be the second to last home game for the Wildcats as they have three more regular season games left.

"There is nothing good about playing on the road."
JUNIOR CAPTAIN JESSICA ANDREWS

"It is tougher to play on the road, because at home we are familiar with our surroundings and we have our own routine," junior goalkeeper Amber Easterbrook said.

The Wildcats came into the road trip ranked ninth in the regional poll.

"There is nothing good about playing on the road," junior captain Jessica Andrews added. "The long bus rides and extremely hostile crowds can really get to you."

This marks the first time in school history that girls soccer has ever been ranked. The girls now return home for four straight home games including games against Western Washington on Oct. 22 and Western Oregon on Nov. 1.
B-sballers call the courts home

by Natalie To
Staff reporter

A body hits the gym floor and slides back a few feet.

Drenched in sweat and not saying a word, a freshman education major Ryan Starbuck gets up and makes the next shot. In this particular game of one on one, Starbuck wins.

"Without a purpose," said Starbuck. "I can't do it."

After day play people just like Starbuck go to the gym to play basketball.

They come from different back grounds and being different styles of play.

Wearing silver shorts and a black Central Washington t-shirt, Starbuck jets off to play another game of five on five.

"Especially in street ball, Butting heads on the court is common," said Lanier. "but highly skilled as well." Bas Griffin loves the game.

Griffin has witnessed people who haven't but always wanted who haven't but always wanted to play, said. "We get to maintain our composure." That's exactly what the Wildcats did as the match went on. "We were confident," junior outside hitter and middle blocker Erin Norris says. "We knew we could do it."

The second set once again started off close. But with the score tied at 11, WOU's junior middle blocker Sharon Peterson earned a kill and the Wolves force the final set.

The Wildcats hung tough but gave up the final points to the Wolves as the the match ended with two hit errors by Zamora and Norris.

The Wolves were led by Try, who tied a career high 23 kills and set a career high for digs with 23.

The Wildcats will play the on the road as they will play the Saints of Saint Martin on Thursday Oct. 23 in Lacy and then travel to Billings to take on the Montana State Billings Yellow Jackets on Saturday Oct. 25.

between intramural football and playing various instruments, freshmen business and computer science double major Ryan Valdez plays for the adrenaline rush, for his friends and for fun.

"Without a purpose," said Starbuck. "I can't do it."

The team is all too real for community member Issac Lanier. Lanier, who took his ACL completely after going up against a guard during a practice while playing for Western Washington College in 2007.

Lanier has played basketball for 19 years and his cousin, Fred Jones, plays for the Knicks.

"It really doesn't matter who you are or where you come from," said Lanier. "it doesn't matter. everybody tries to size each other up, find out who's who and try to get them on your team. You're always going to have errors and bring different styles of play."

"It's not a comfortable feeling," Lanier said. "especially in street ball, Butting heads on the court is common."

especially in street ball, because you have a mixture of guys that have played in high school or in college and guys who haven't but always wanted to play," said Lanier.

Lanier says some college athletes play for the recognition.

"The game gets to them and the sense of urgency to get better diminishes," Lanier said.

"You might lose it, but you're not losing the game like a child would lose it."

Then there's community member Matt Summers.

With a long board on his left arm and a basketball in the other, he walks into the gym as if it were his own playground.

Summers plays every night or whenever he gets the chance.

"I play baseball for the school, so it's something I can do to get away from baseball, come play basketball," Summer said with a grin.

one want to see want kind of magic he could produce on the court.

"You can develop a friendship or a rivalry that even extends past the court and it doesn't have to be a negative thing," Lanier said.

Butting heads on the court is common.

"Especially in street ball, because you have a mixture of guys that have played in high school or in college and guys who haven't but always wanted to play," said Lanier.

Lanier says some college athletes play for the recognition.

"The game gets to them and the sense of urgency to get better diminishes," Lanier said.

"You might lose it, but you're not losing the game like a child would lose it."

Then there's community member Matt Summers.

With a long board on his left arm and a basketball in the other, he walks into the gym as if it were his own playground.

Summers plays every night or whenever he gets the chance.

"I play baseball for the school, so it's something I can do to get away from baseball, come play basketball," Summer said with a grin.

one want to see want kind of magic he could produce on the court.

"You can develop a friendship or a rivalry that even extends past the court and it doesn't have to be a negative thing," Lanier said.

Butting heads on the court is common.

"Especially in street ball, because you have a mixture of guys that have played in high school or in college and guys who haven't but always wanted to play," said Lanier.

Lanier says some college athletes play for the recognition.

"The game gets to them and the sense of urgency to get better diminishes," Lanier said.

"You might lose it, but you're not losing the game like a child would lose it."

Then there's community member Matt Summers.
The Wildcat men's rugby team pulled off a major upset Saturday defeating number 2 Utah 25-7. The win improved the Wildcats to 3-0 on the season.

In a game that saw a record fan turnout, the Wildcats pulled out a win. A mix of great defense and a lack of costly turnovers won the game. "Our hard work and tight set pieces won the game for us today," said senior team captain Joe Schmid.

Central Washington University started the scoring off as junior Tim Stanfill put the Wildcats on the board early on a try and conversion early in the first half.

The Wildcat defense has come up huge all season.

"Our defensive launch came up huge today," senior back Mike Nelson said. "The Wildcat defense has come up huge all season.

"We were looking to even the score against these guys," said junior flanker Ryan Moore. The Wildcat defense has come up huge all season.

The Wildcats ended up scoring two more times on a run by senior Devin Snyder and another kick by Lee. This made the final result 25-7 in favor of the Wildcats.

"Our defensive launch came up huge today," senior back Mike Nelson said. "The Wildcat defense has come up huge all season.

"We were looking to even the score against these guys," said junior flanker Ryan Moore. The Wildcat defense has come up huge all season.

We accept anybody with any experience to participate in the club or the class are surprised. Rudie's students from his classes have been showing up to the club practices. "We can learn a lot from the sport," said sophomore Will Rechkoff. "You can learn a lot of French words as well as fencing terms.

Rechkoff is one of the students from the Rudie's physical education class, and it was his first time to participate in the club practice on this day. "It's an incredible workout," Rechkoff said. "I like dueling somebody. It's the most fun part of the sport.

Rudie and Coelho explain that the club's goal as whole is to get more club members. "We are trying to create a bridge between the club and the class," Coelho said. "Now Severin is teaching the class and being active in the club to pull more students from the classes into the club.

Rudie explained that some new students have been recently showing up to the club practices, and he hopes these students and other students will be showing up regularly, so that the club can get more members. "We accept anybody with any experience to both the classes and the club practice," Rudie said. "If you are looking for a challenge and some exercise or whole bunch of muscles which you normally wouldn't use, this is a great place to be."

The club has practices in room 284 at the Student Union and Recreation Center from 10 to 11 p.m. on Monday and Wednesday. Central is also going to offer both the beginning and intermediate fencing classes during winter quarter.
FOOT BAGGING
continued from page 11

There is also the two-minute routine where the foot-bagger has a choice of a song or not. This is where the foot-bagger gets all his or her points. The points in the competitions are called adds.

To be considered "pro," the foot-bagger will consistently hit three-add tricks and above.

There are millions of different moves and tricks and they all have names. There are moves that are called uptown moves, which are tricks done while the bag is moving upward. Some uptown tricks are the butterfly, clipper and atomic, which are some of the simpler moves. These involve kicking the bag up and moving the leg over or around the bag while it is in motion. A five add move is called a torque.

Not only does Wren enjoy foot-bagging, he also makes his own. There are different types of bags that can be used. One type of bag is a simple four-panel bag that is filled with lead. There are also 32-panel bags which are harder to make. Panels are the separate pieces of material that are stitched together to make the bag.

Wren will warm up anywhere from 20 to 45 minutes depending on what he is doing that day. In one session Wren says he could lose up to two gallons of water. "There is so much coordination, agility, aerobic and anaerobic activity," Wren said.

There are millions of different moves and tricks and they all have names. There are moves that are called uptown moves, which are tricks done while the bag is moving upward. Some uptown tricks are the butterfly, clipper and atomic, which are some of the simpler moves. These involve kicking the bag up and moving the leg over or around the bag while it is in motion. A five add move is called a torque.

Wren will warm up anywhere from 20 to 45 minutes depending on what he is doing that day. In one session Wren says he could lose up to two gallons of water. "There is so much coordination, agility, aerobic and anaerobic activity," Wren said.

The adds bag while it is in motion. A five add move is called a torque.

"There is so much coordination, agility, aerobic and anaerobic activity," Wren said.

The competition is really melo-dramatic. According to Wren, the foot-baggers technically know who will win because the skill level is so apparent. Foot-baggers compete because they enjoy it. There really is no way to cheat in foot-bagging. It is strictly skill.

Foot-baggers make them for each other, and if they see one they really like, foot-baggers are often willing to custom make them for each other. Wren had one made from a foot-bagger from Australia. A good bag is determined by the foot-bagger and his or her preferences. The floppiness and weight are two key components when making a decision.

The practice and time it takes to be at Wren's level is often underestimated.

Wren is also looking forward to 2010 because, according to Wren, it is rumored that the worlds competition will be held in Portland, Ore.
Wildcat softball earns another exciting award

by Ashley Scrupps
Staff reporter

On Oct. 11, 2008, Logan Mohr (right field) and Kassy Druffel (left field), 2008 graduate players from Central Washington University softball team, were able to fly to Orlando, Fla. to receive yet another award for sportsmanship and fair play. This award was established by the U.S. Olympic Committee (USOC) in 1985 to honor USOC President and Olympic medalist Jack Kelly.

Each year, this award is presented to an athlete, a coach or an official in recognition of an outstanding act of fair play and sportsmanship.

Sandria Kelly, Jack Kelly's wife, presented the award to Mohr and Druffel on behalf of the 2007-08 roster during a lunch.

The award was presented at the USOC's Olympic Assembly in Orlando, Fla. Every year the Olympic committee puts on this event. Every sport appoints one person to represent them.

Then they break up into panels and talk about different things such as the Beijing Olympics and where the next Team Olympics to be held.

“I felt honored to be a special guest at this event while being able to receive this award on behalf of our team,” Druffel said.

After all the awards the Central softball team has accepted, one might think it would get repetitive, but it is in fact the opposite. With each award they receive they are more and more excited.

“We’re absolutely pleased that some little thing like this has gone so far,” said head softball coach Gary Frederick.

“The publicity has put the university in a great light, the longer this keeps going, the better it is for our school.”

The USOC describes fair play as an individual or team dedicating to a season-ending injury as a foot is misplaced or team whose conduct and attitude demonstrate gracious behavior before, during and after competition.

“Receiving all of these acknowledgments has definitely made me think twice about the way I plan to coach my team in the future,” Mohr said. “Sportsmanship and fair play will be something I emphasize. It’s not all about winning and losing; it’s about your character on and off the field.”

This award was given to the Wildcat softball team all of this past April. The team has accepted, one might think it would get repetitive, but it is in fact the opposite. With each award they receive they are more and more excited.

“We’re absolutely pleased that some little thing like this has gone so far,” said head softball coach Gary Frederick.

“The publicity has put the university in a great light, the longer this keeps going, the better it is for our school.”

The USOC describes fair play as an individual or team dedicating to a season-ending injury as a foot is misplaced or team whose conduct and attitude demonstrate gracious behavior before, during and after competition.

“Receiving all of these acknowledgments has definitely made me think twice about the way I plan to coach my team in the future,” Mohr said. “Sportsmanship and fair play will be something I emphasize. It’s not all about winning and losing; it’s about your character on and off the field.”

This award was given to the Wildcat softball team all of this past April. The team has accepted, one might think it would get repetitive, but it is in fact the opposite. With each award they receive they are more and more excited.

“We’re absolutely pleased that some little thing like this has gone so far,” said head softball coach Gary Frederick.

“The publicity has put the university in a great light, the longer this keeps going, the better it is for our school.”

The USOC describes fair play as an individual or team dedicating to a season-ending injury as a foot is misplaced or team whose conduct and attitude demonstrate gracious behavior before, during and after competition.

“Receiving all of these acknowledgments has definitely made me think twice about the way I plan to coach my team in the future,” Mohr said. “Sportsmanship and fair play will be something I emphasize. It’s not all about winning and losing; it’s about your character on and off the field.”

This award was given to the Wildcat softball team all of this past April. The team has accepted, one might think it would get repetitive, but it is in fact the opposite. With each award they receive they are more and more excited.