2-19-2009

Observer

Central Washington University

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.cwu.edu/cwu_student_newspaper

Recommended Citation

Central Washington University, "Observer" (2009). CWU Student Newspaper. 2370.
https://digitalcommons.cwu.edu/cwu_student_newspaper/2370

This Book is brought to you for free and open access by the University Archives and Special Collections at ScholarWorks@CWU. It has been accepted for inclusion in CWU Student Newspaper by an authorized administrator of ScholarWorks@CWU. For more information, please contact scholarworks@cwu.edu.
Central remembers Rebecca Shaw
CWU graduate, co-pilot in New York plane crash killed

by Gloria Staley-Malenic
Staff reporter

Rebecca (Morris) Shaw knew she wanted to fly since her senior year of high school - it was her passion.

“I can’t even imagine doing anything else for the rest of my life,” Shaw wrote in her application for Central Washington University’s aviation program in 2004. “As long as I’m flying never made its destination.

University’s aviation program was her passion. Senior year of high school - it was Shaw’s goal to become a pilot.

A few years later, she graduated with a Bachelor of Science in flight operations and had already flown 2,244 hours.

Shaw worked as an airplane dispatcher at Ellensburg’s Bower Field Airport.

While a student at CWU, Shaw worked as an airplane dispatcher at Ellensburg's Bower Field Airport. Clark, who would fly there on the weekends, remembers the smile on Shaw’s face when she would welcome him and other pilots back.

Students were struck by the community’s response.

In a recent telephone conversation, Shaw’s sister told Hoover that their family thought the community’s response was incredible, and that they were overwhelmed with all the people coming out of the woodwork, telling stories and sharing how Rebecca touched so many lives.

The aviation department at Central would like to express their condolences and sympathy to Rebecca’s family and friends, and to the families of everyone involved in the crash,” Hoover said. “They would also like current students and alumni to know that they can contact the department for support.”

The aviation department is coordinating with CWU Student Health and Counseling to provide support to the students who may need it. A scholarship fund in Shaw’s memory is also being planned.

The cause of the crash is not yet confirmed, however the National Transportation Safety Board revealed that the crew had been discussing significant ice buildup on the windshield and leading edge of the wings.

Shaw was honored in Puyallup at the Department of Aviation Alumni private gathering at the Northwest Aviation Trade Show. Campus memorial services to honor Shaw are being planned and will be posted on the aviation department website.

Shaw was 30, a recent telephone conversation, Hoover said.

According to Hoover, the department is very close and connected.

The cause of the crash is not yet confirmed, however the National Transportation Safety Board revealed that the crew had been discussing significant ice buildup on the windshield and leading edge of the wings.

Shaw was honored in Puyallup at the Department of Aviation Alumni private gathering at the Northwest Aviation Trade Show. Campus memorial services to honor Shaw are being planned and will be posted on the aviation department website.

Rebecca Lynne Shaw
April 30, 1984 - February 12, 2009

Photos courtesy of Meagan Patey

Above: Rebecca Shaw graduated from Central Washington University in 2004. Below: Rebecca Shaw and Brenda Murphy, Central’s flight instructor at the time, at Ellensburg’s Bower Field Airport.

The cause of the crash is not yet confirmed, however the National Transportation Safety Board revealed that the crew had been discussing significant ice buildup on the windshield and leading edge of the wings.

Shaw was honored in Puyallup at the Department of Aviation Alumni private gathering at the Northwest Aviation Trade Show. Campus memorial services to honor Shaw are being planned and will be posted on the aviation department website.

Rebecca Lynne Shaw
April 30, 1984 - February 12, 2009

Central remembers Rebecca Shaw
CWU graduate, co-pilot in New York plane crash killed

by Gloria Staley-Malenic
Staff reporter

Rebecca (Morris) Shaw knew she wanted to fly since her senior year of high school - it was her passion.

“I can’t even imagine doing anything else for the rest of my life,” Shaw wrote in her application for Central Washington University’s aviation program in 2004. “As long as I’m flying never made its destination.

University’s aviation program was her passion. Senior year of high school - it was Shaw’s goal to become a pilot.

A few years later, she graduated with a Bachelor of Science in flight operations and had already flown 2,244 hours.

Shaw worked as an airplane dispatcher at Ellensburg’s Bower Field Airport.

While a student at CWU, Shaw worked as an airplane dispatcher at Ellensburg's Bower Field Airport. Clark, who would fly there on the weekends, remembers the smile on Shaw’s face when she would welcome him and other pilots back.

Students were struck by the community’s response.

In a recent telephone conversation, Shaw’s sister told Hoover that their family thought the community’s response was incredible, and that they were overwhelmed with all the people coming out of the woodwork, telling stories and sharing how Rebecca touched so many lives.

The aviation department at Central would like to express their condolences and sympathy to Rebecca’s family and friends, and to the families of everyone involved in the crash,” Hoover said. “They would also like current students and alumni to know that they can contact the department for support.”

The aviation department is coordinating with CWU Student Health and Counseling to provide support to the students who may need it. A scholarship fund in Shaw’s memory is also being planned.

The cause of the crash is not yet confirmed, however the National Transportation Safety Board revealed that the crew had been discussing significant ice buildup on the windshield and leading edge of the wings.

Shaw was honored in Puyallup at the Department of Aviation Alumni private gathering at the Northwest Aviation Trade Show. Campus memorial services to honor Shaw are being planned and will be posted on the aviation department website.

Rebecca Lynne Shaw
April 30, 1984 - February 12, 2009

Photos courtesy of Meagan Patey

Above: Rebecca Shaw graduated from Central Washington University in 2004. Below: Rebecca Shaw and Brenda Murphy, Central’s flight instructor at the time, at Ellensburg’s Bower Field Airport.

The cause of the crash is not yet confirmed, however the National Transportation Safety Board revealed that the crew had been discussing significant ice buildup on the windshield and leading edge of the wings.

Shaw was honored in Puyallup at the Department of Aviation Alumni private gathering at the Northwest Aviation Trade Show. Campus memorial services to honor Shaw are being planned and will be posted on the aviation department website.

Rebecca Lynne Shaw
April 30, 1984 - February 12, 2009

Photos courtesy of Meagan Patey

Above: Rebecca Shaw graduated from Central Washington University in 2004. Below: Rebecca Shaw and Brenda Murphy, Central’s flight instructor at the time, at Ellensburg’s Bower Field Airport.

The cause of the crash is not yet confirmed, however the National Transportation Safety Board revealed that the crew had been discussing significant ice buildup on the windshield and leading edge of the wings.

Shaw was honored in Puyallup at the Department of Aviation Alumni private gathering at the Northwest Aviation Trade Show. Campus memorial services to honor Shaw are being planned and will be posted on the aviation department website.

Rebecca Lynne Shaw
April 30, 1984 - February 12, 2009

Photos courtesy of Meagan Patey

Above: Rebecca Shaw graduated from Central Washington University in 2004. Below: Rebecca Shaw and Brenda Murphy, Central’s flight instructor at the time, at Ellensburg’s Bower Field Airport.

The cause of the crash is not yet confirmed, however the National Transportation Safety Board revealed that the crew had been discussing significant ice buildup on the windshield and leading edge of the wings.

Shaw was honored in Puyallup at the Department of Aviation Alumni private gathering at the Northwest Aviation Trade Show. Campus memorial services to honor Shaw are being planned and will be posted on the aviation department website.

Rebecca Lynne Shaw
April 30, 1984 - February 12, 2009

Photos courtesy of Meagan Patey

Above: Rebecca Shaw graduated from Central Washington University in 2004. Below: Rebecca Shaw and Brenda Murphy, Central’s flight instructor at the time, at Ellensburg’s Bower Field Airport.

The cause of the crash is not yet confirmed, however the National Transportation Safety Board revealed that the crew had been discussing significant ice buildup on the windshield and leading edge of the wings.

Shaw was honored in Puyallup at the Department of Aviation Alumni private gathering at the Northwest Aviation Trade Show. Campus memorial services to honor Shaw are being planned and will be posted on the aviation department website.

Rebecca Lynne Shaw
April 30, 1984 - February 12, 2009

Photos courtesy of Meagan Patey

Above: Rebecca Shaw graduated from Central Washington University in 2004. Below: Rebecca Shaw and Brenda Murphy, Central’s flight instructor at the time, at Ellensburg’s Bower Field Airport.
Seventh annual Majors Fair clears the air for students

by Quinn Eddy
Asst. News Editor
and Erica Spalti
Staff reporter

Central Washington University's seventh annual Majors Fair gave students the opportunity to meet with over 100 Central faculty members.

"I found it extremely helpful," said Tyler Racy, freshman undeclared. "I have zero idea what I wanted to do and it was nice being able to actually talk to professors outside of the classroom. They are more friendly and normal then. I think that this is a really good way to see what is out there; I never knew how many possible majors I could choose from. Students really need to take advantage of this."

As the country dives deeper into economic recession, the importance of selecting a strong major has never been more important.

"There is a common misconception that all students have to do is apply and then they are done, but that is not the case and that is why we are here to help," Jaqualyn Johnson, director of Career Services, said. "Students who have and collect information are more prone to stay in school and continue on their path."

Faculty members present at the event came from every department. Majors representatives from Career Services, the Writing Center, the Math Center and Academic Advising were just a few of the departments flexing their academic muscles.

"As an undeclared major, this college fair is a great opportunity to narrow down my interests," Jonathan Polder, sophomore undeclared, said.

Freshman Nicole Atkinson gets information about the Health, Human, Performance, and Nutrition major.

Co-sponsored by Career Services, University Housing and New Student Programs, the Majors Fair emphasized the impressive number of career pathways open to Central students.

"It's a really good idea to get connected early on," Johnson said.

If students are having trouble narrowing down a major, Career Services offers counseling that helps in the selection of a career, based on personal values, interests and skills. "Using your strengths is incredibly important," Johnson said.

According to Dr. Mike Jackson, physics professor, physics department internships include research opportunities with the National Science Foundation and NASA.

"I had a student who went to work at Johnson Space center for a summer internship," Jackson said. "Get involved as early as possible."

According to Jackson, a lot of people are interested in physics so he's been helping people with what they can expect in the physics major.

"A basic education in physics opens the doors for careers in areas such as patent law, engineering and graduate studies," Jackson said.

Career Services welcomes both students and alumni. In addition to career counseling, the Career Center offers mock interviews, career assessments, and will assist in the building of a good resume and cover letter.

With these tools at hand, Career Services will also help in actual job searches. The Career Services job and internship search engine has links to over 245 potential employers.

---

For more information
Career Services
www.cwu.edu/~career
Phone
509-963-2404 or 509-963-1921

---

Where are you going to live next year?

UNIVERSITY HOUSING AND NEW STUDENT PROGRAMS
www.cwu.edu/~housing 509-963-1831

DINING SERVICES
www.cwu.edu/~dining 509-963-1991

---
Yakima closes habilitation center to improve lives

by Gloria Staley-Malone
Staff reporter

The Yakima Valley Residential Habilitation Center (RHIC), which provides nursing home services to developmentally disabled citizens, is on Governor Christine Gregoire's rejection list.

According to Gov. Gregoire’s 2009-2011 biennial budget proposal, Yakima Valley School (YVS) will close by 2011, and will begin moving out this fall. Currently, Yakima Valley School (YVS) has 88 residents living on the campus, aged from 18 to 69 years old. According to the proposal, only the school closes, the residents will move to other RHC-supported living or nursing homes.

Although the closing of YVS is motivated by the state budget cuts, Von Elison, executive director of Central Washington Disability Resources in Ellensburg, believes it is a human and civil rights issue.

"It may be an economic crisis, but while we continue to let this [institutionalization] happen, it is a crisis of conscience," Elison said. According to Elison, the agency is looking at the closure as an opportunity to begin to consolidate and downsize institutions.

All five RHC facilities in Washington state have seen decreased resident numbers as institutionalization has been on the decline. In Washington state, by 2008, there were only 988 people living in RHC’s, compared to just over 4,000 in 1966.

The declining trend is a result of special education in the 1970s and advances in providing quality supports and services that allow people to stay in their own homes and communities.

"I think [the closing of YVS] is a positive step," said Bruce Tabb, executive director of Ellmview. "Once people are moved out of a facility they can have a better quality of life."

According to Tabb, Ellensburg has always been about community-based living as an alternative to institutions for people with developmental disabilities. Ellmview is one main program that has been in the Ellensburg community since 1965 providing assistance and home care to those with developmental disabilities living on their own.

While many in the Ellensburg community are in favor of the closure, not all people around the state are. The Washington State Democratic Disabilities Issues Caucus (WSDIC) actively opposes the proposal saying the closure would “inflict serious economic harm to the local area.”

According to Dolores White, YVS Admission Coordinator, parents and the residents concerned for their children living in YVS. Many of the residents have been in the institution the majority of their lives and the employees are like family to them, White said.

In a Northwest Public Radio interview, Juanita Needham, mother of a resident in YVS, said that YVS is her son’s home and that Gregoire “doesn’t realize that the kids in this facility are more fragile than the kids in others.”

While White does support people with disabilities living in the community, she said, “The majority of our residents are profoundly disabled and require 24/7 care. If families or guardians felt comfortable with them being in the community they would have chose that for them.”

The state labor union that represents YVS employees is actively against the proposal. Critics say the amount saved by closing the facility is not worth the amount of care residents need, and even state Democrats support the proposal.

The state Democratic Party’s Central Committee, which oversees the organization’s state-level business and legislative priorities, unanimously passed a resolution opposing closure of YVS.

As an advocate for people with developmental disabilities, Tabb said he wants to make sure the legislature is aware of the success people have in the Ellensburg community, hoping it will support the closure.

One man who has been living on his own in Ellensburg for 19 years has benefited from local programs. At the age of 5 Mike Carpenter was placed in YVS, left at age 14, later went back for a short period of time.

“I never liked it,” Carpenter said. “The way I remember it in my head and my heart is not good to think about.”

Carpenter now has a home care provider that cooks for him and does his laundry. Everything else is taken care of by Carpenter himself. Working at Ellmview paper recycling, Carpenter enjoys being on his own.

“I like that I can do more stuff for myself,” Carpenter said. “I can be with my friends, or watch the TV programs or movies I want to watch.” Disney movies are Carpenter’s favorite and he has quite the collection.

Carpenter and his friends are a close circle who support one another and are very passionate about closures of institutions. Referring to the people in the facilities as their brothers and sisters, they are concerned for their safety and freedom.

Carpenter, along with his friends and other advocates, are returning to Olympia on March 2 to have their voices heard to support the closure of YVS.

According to White, YVS has had groups of employees go to Olympia to lobby to keep YVS open for their residents and those that don’t have a voice, every chance they get.

“That people think they can tear them [residents of YVS] away from their community, environment, home, and family, and expect them to be OK, is what concerns me,” White said. "These are fragile, vulnerable people and it could be a life or death circumstance.”
Central students and staff lobby for Planned Parenthood

by Megan Peters
Staff reporter

Passing around petition sheets and staging demonstrations is probably what comes to mind when people hear the phrase "citizen activists" or "lobbying." However, that's not always the case. Every year in Ellensburg, Planned Parenthood works with other affiliates in Washington state, working along with NARAL (National Abortion and Reproductive Rights Action League), Pro-Choice America to train community members how to be citizen activists.

Citizen activists are said to be the original grass roots organizers. They are the people that have built a club from the ground up, organized activities in children's schools and mobilized neighbors to turn out to city council meetings and the state capital. Citizen activists work to build relationships with people in their community and offer them opportunities for leadership.

People support Planned Parenthood and Reproductive Health and Rights Lobby Day in large numbers, according to Jen Ham, public affairs field organizer of Planned Parenthood of Central Washington.

"Across the state, Reproductive Health and Rights Lobby Day generally has approximately 350 to 400 participants," Ham said. "We are hoping to have 70 from eastern Washington and about 50 from the affiliated area of Planned Parenthood of Central Washington."

Every year Planned Parenthood usually focuses on two issues. This year they are lobbying for funding for the Common m u n i t y Service Office (CSO), Family Planning Nursing Program that was recently cut in Washington state, along with general funding for reproductive health care. They are also asking legislators to support the Proven Programs Act, which would ensure that the state only applies for federal funds for sexual health programs that are evidence-based, comprehensive, and proven to be effective at delaying sexual activity amongst youth. The act is similar to the 2007 Healthy Youth Act, which states that if schools in Washington teach sexual health education, it must be medically and scientifically accurate and comprehensive.

When people think of Planned Parenthood, they think we are pushing for abortions, but that's not it," said Erika Harder, senior French major and past lobbyist for Planned Parenthood. "We are always working to keep reproductive health available for everyone."

Planned Parenthood strongly believes that it is important for people to create the kind of change they wish to see. It works to give citizens the tools needed to help them reach that change. Each year Planned Parenthood holds Reproductive Health and Rights Lobby Day. It is a good way for students to get involved in the political process, according to Harder.

"It is important to become involved in any way you can," Harder said. "People take our system for granted. They think, 'I voted, so that is enough, but it's not. You have to watch your legislators and be active.'"

Lobbying is not the only way to reach state legislators. Harder explains that she sends e-mail to them on a regular basis. For Scott Patton, junior political science major, lobbying was a natural choice that matched his beliefs.

"I got involved with lobbying because I believe that access to the family planning services that Planned Parenthood provides improves the quality of life for people who may not normally have access to these services," Patton said. Each year Planned Parenthood picks a day during the legislative session to visit Washington state's elected representatives to discuss reproductive health rights. This year they are holding a training session about lobbying on Sunday, Feb. 22. It will include practicing mock lobby visits, training on reproductive issues, and a chance for lobbyists to meet their fellow activists before heading to Olympia.

Approximately 70 people from all over eastern Washington will attend the training. They will be traveling via bus to Olympia the next morning to meet with local legislators. While the precise influence the lobbyists have over legislative decision-making in the United States can never be fully determined, every opportunity counts.

Lottery determines 952 new residents

by Michael Ingram
Staff reporter

To accommodate the rapidly growing student body, Central Washington University has built two new yet-to-be-named residence halls that will house 476 students each.

These new residence halls are located just south of Central's Student Village Apartments and north of Central's Music Education Building. The new residence halls will be for students who currently live in residence halls. There will be a lottery to decide who gets in.

The lottery will choose the 952 students who will be living in the new residence halls that are opening next fall.

According to Richard DeShields, senior director of University Housing and New Student Programs, each student currently living on campus has been assigned a number which gives them the opportunity to sign up for the new halls.

"Two hundred students have already signed up to be the first to live in Central's new residence halls and the spots are going quick," DeShields said.

"I'm really excited for a chance to live in the new residence halls," Arthur Nowicki, sophomore construction management major, said. "I've lived on campus for two years and would really enjoy a new environment."

According to DeShields, the residence halls cost approximately $38 million and will be paid off throughout the next 30 years using a bonding process.

The money to fund the new halls came from the students' tuition. Along with the money, students helped design the residence halls.

Students on and off campus were surveyed about what they thought an ideal residence hall would look like and over 70 percent of them responded.

The complex will have two of the tallest residence halls on campus with four floors. This is the beginning of an extensive new plan for all the residence halls.

According to DeShields, Central will eventually renovate all the existing residence halls on campus to bring a more modern and fresh feel to the university.

Tips for successful lobbying

- Don't be intimidated by the thought of approaching elected officials.
- Be concise.
- Use all available resources.
- Personalize your appeal.
- Cultivate legislative staff.
- Be honest.
- Research your legislators.
- Identify your bill or issue clearly.
- During the legislative session, constantly check your bill's status.
- Keep things friendly.
- Avoid party politics.
- Be flexible.
- Express gratitude.

Tips courtesy of http://www.chsus.org

Peace Corps
On Campus March 4-5

76 Countries of Service! Combine w/Grad School
Apply Online to interview

Wednesday, March 4
Info Session: 12PM, SURC Room 135
(Recruiter Table: 10AM-3PM, SURC)

apply online
800.424.8580 | www.peacecorps.gov

Quinn Eddy/Observer

Construction nears completion on the new residence halls.
AAP needs more tutors, SI Leadership

Academic Achievement Programs (AAP) at Central Washington University are looking for more tutors and Supplemental Instruction leaders.

During winter quarter, some students who requested tutors have yet to get one because no tutors are available to teach the classes they requested. Those subjects include humanities, sociology, education, philosophy, geology and computer science. According to Student Support Services (SSS) they usually see a spike in tutor requests at the beginning of the quarter, at midterms and finals.

"I don't always have the students [I need and] it's a continuous problem," said Janine Graves, tutoring and SI coordinator. "We never have enough students who can commit. They have certain responsibilities with their classes, and of course, we want them to continue to do well in the subject area they are tutoring."

According to Graves, none of the 30 tutors on hand have taken geology 108, or introduction to environmental geology, which a student had requested help with.

"If there is a position for a sociology tutor, we would be happy to announce that to our classes," said sociology department Chair Hong Xiao. "We have many excellent students who would make great tutors."

Because the request can sometimes be overwhelming, AAP will forgo the "grade of a B+ or higher" requirement so students can get the help they need. All students must fill out a tutee application form before they can get a tutor.

"I know how desperate these students are, and they really need help," Graves said. "That's what we're here for."

Tutors must have at least a 2.7 GPA, have received a grade of at least a B+ in the class that they wish to tutor and be enrolled in at least six or more credits each quarter, according to Graves. They must be enrolled in a tutoring methods course, EDF (Education Foundation) 201.

"Students are very busy," said Neil McFarlein, director of Student Support Services. "They work. Some of them would like to [attend every session], but it's not possible. Many of them miss their tutoring sessions sometimes ... In effect [the tutees are] teaching themselves because they wait 10 or 15 minutes and [the tutors] don't show up."

SI provides extra help to students enrolled in courses which are "historically difficult," where enrollments are down or the class has a high percentage of withdrawals, D grades or failures.

"It's a larger time commitment," Graves said. "You have to take enough of the courses to feel really comfortable and knowledgeable in a certain class, and the instructors who prefer that ... I would love to have more SI sessions if I had the ... students who could commit to 10 to 12 hours a week."

SI sessions are open to all Central students enrolled in the SI-targeted class, and attendance at SI sessions is voluntary and confidential.

Graves said SSS is trying to hire employees to promote SI. The more students that sign up for SI, the better chances tutees for success.

For winter quarter 2009, classes in math, biology, chemistry and physics are currently being offered. Drop-in classes for accounting, business, economics and finance are also available.

According to the AAP Web site, SI programs have proven successful in increasing student achievement and retention.

SI leaders maintain close contact with the professor and students, and attend those classes with the student's regularly.

In addition to getting more tutors and SI leaders, AAP is working on hiring people full-time to promote SMART THINKING, an online tutoring program that is available to students. There will be a faculty and student demonstration of the program later in the year, according to Graves.

Pregnant? You have options.
1-800-395-HELP
Free. Caring. Confidential
In Ellensburg call 925-2273 or visit us at 111 East 4th
www.optionline.org

Retractions

Planned Parenthood

The pull quote in last week's Planned Parenthood story was attributed to Jen Ham, but was actually made by Dena Dinius, RN, CS0 family planning nurse.

Wildcat Shop Theft

The Wildcat Shop story referred to individuals buying textbooks from Jerro's or the Wildcat Shop, and then selling them back to the other store. The real crime is people stealing textbooks and then selling them back for a profit.
Hollywood flicks head downhill

Kayla Schroader
Editor-in-Chief

I don't feel I'm alone in thinking Hollywood has gone downhill. It's been ages since I've seen a movie that really stuck with me. I can't even remember the last time I watched any sort of television programming that enlightened me or made my day. I know that they're out there, somewhere, but the media has accepted an awfully poor standard recently. Even I, unfortunately find myself sucked into those studio, scripted reality shows. What a joke.

Last month I spent an entire Saturday watching new releases. That's right, eight movies total. I kept popping in another DVD, crossing my fingers that this one wouldn't waste the next two hours of my life. Nonetheless, the whole day was drained by bad movies. "Funny Games," "Surfer Dude," "Seven Pounds," "My Best Friend's Girl," "Defiance," "Change-ling," "Zack and Miri Make a Porno," "James Bond: Quantum of Solace." In my opinion, "Defiance" wasn't too bad, it had a great theme and war stories never seem to get old. I even loved some of the leading actors in my playlist of featured films. It just seemed as though plots were stale and open ended, the drama was overhated and the humor was, well, ridiculous. I'm afraid the dry spell in the economy is somehow weighing on the creative genius of the movie industry. Maybe movie makers are too scared to take chances at risk of losing profit. Maybe it's just my opinion shifting as I grow older and less easily entertained. Whatever the reason, I'm rather disappointed.

Some companies have reported to other means of attraction, also known as the 3-D theater experiences. Media makers such as Laika Entertainment, Wilden Media and Lionsgate prefer to interact with their viewers by entering a new dimension. Tim Burton's "Coraline," is an exceptional 3-D animated film. But aside from that, I would associate the films with amusement park rides more so than the art of the big screen. God forbid the next generation fall back on this sort of media. Magic has been made with movies before, and in time, I'm sure it will again.

To read more letters to the Editor, please visit cwu.edu/observer and click on opinion.

Steve Wenger
Wildcat Shop director

I respect Mr. Smith's opinions and I am actually glad that a community member not associated with the college felt free enough to express his opinions in the Observer. However, the manner in which Mr. Smith presented his points came off very offensive and I believe they hurt his case rather than helped. Mr. Smith expresses his belief that there is no invisible curtain between the community and the campus. I for one feel that there is a small gap. But honestly how could there not be? The majority of the campus community consists of adults in their early twenties who have a much different lifestyle than the Ellensburg community at large. I believe this gap is unavoidable but I agree with Mr. Smith that sometimes the curtain is made out to be a much bigger deal than it is. The two communities get along quite well from my observations, and I have never heard of a case of angst between the two, until I read the letter in the Observer.

While I agree with Mr. Smith about the size of the curtain, I feel his remarks against Mr. James are misplaced and completely uncalled for. Keith James is a respected member and leader of the campus community and to completely disparage him in print is unnecessary and places a wedge between the two communities. Mr. James' idea for a safe ride program is exactly what any college campus needs. If anyone goes out to the bars with a group of friends or by themselves and has a couple of drinks, they should not drive home. They don't have to be "blotto sloppy drunk" to be over the blood alcohol limit of .08. In fact, for most people, two to three drinks will put them over the limit. Is it irresponsible for them not to want to risk their lives as well as the lives around them? Mr. Smith mentions treating the college students just as you would treat the rest of the community. I agree. I believe everyone in Ellensburg should have access to a safe ride program because I am sure there are plenty of locals who enjoy going out with friends and family to dance, hang out and drink. Regardless of what Mr. Smith thinks, just because you like to go out and appreciate having a drink or two with your friends does not make you an alcoholic, and it does not necessarily mean you have a problem.

Stacey Knabel
Biology major

Preventing drunk driving is hardly what I would call ridiculous. Just because a person has had too much to drink and doesn't feel comfortable driving does not make them an alcoholic or even mean that they are drunk. Finding an alternate way home, be it walking or getting a ride from a sober person, such as with a safe ride program, is very responsible. A person who "has a few drinks" and then plays the wait-until-I-feel-sober game is not a person I would trust driving. Many accidents where alcohol plays a role are situations where the driver was drunk but didn't feel like it. I for one feel that the best way to prevent drunk driving is to create a safe ride program, so that everyone can get home safely without driving drunk, or even close to it.

Chelsea Casey
Public relations major

I would like to take a minute and just make a couple of clarifications to last week's article regarding textbook theft so the students get a better idea of the situation. Wildcat Shop employees had found a handful of textbook sensors that had been ripped off of the back covers of a number of different books. The Wildcat Shop and Jerro's work very closely together to make sure that no one is going to make money from the sale of stolen goods. Finding an alternate way to match the torn back covers with the tags that were left in our store (we aren't CSI, but we are smart). We have been working hard to stop the theft from our store. Jerro's had already communicated the fact that we had books that had been damaged and stolen in order to sell back for cash. She had stolen the books from the Wildcat Shop and then tried to sell them back to Jerro's as part of their buy back program. It wasn't just that she stole the books from the Wildcat Shop, but that she was trying to rip off Jerro's with stolen merchandise. The Wildcat Shop and Jerro's had already communicated the fact that we had books that had been damaged and stolen in order to sell back for cash. When Jerro's received the books the student was trying to sell back as her own, Jerro's copied her information and notified us as well as the police. We were then able to match the torn back covers with the tags that were left in our store (we aren't CSI, but we are clever). Charges have been pressed against this individual. Buying your books at the Wildcat Shop and then selling them back to Jerro's, or vice versa, isn't illegal. It's the STEALING the books and then trying to sell them back that is illegal.

Also, when we stated that "if a person gets caught, they could jeopardize their education," we are completely serious. First, the institution can expel you for theft, whether it is in the Wildcat Shop, an administrative building, or computer lab. Second, not only will charges be pressed, but if the theft is over a certain amount of dollars, the student can be charged and convicted of a felony, which will stay on their record. Third, and in many ways most importantly, a felony charge can affect the ability to get federal financial aid for school and can show up on employment background checks. The Wildcat Shop, Jerro's and Campus Police have been working hard to stop the theft because not only is it poor human etiquette, but when businesses lose money to theft, they have to make up that money somehow, and more often than not that involves raising the prices. Help us keep more money in your pockets by keeping theft down. For more information, please feel free to contact Steve Wenger at 509-963-1353.

Steve Wenger
Wildcat Shop director

The artist's eye ...
Internet thieves tap the wires

According to Jupiter Research ... 14 percent of wireless owners have accessed a neighboring connection.

I absolutely love Chinese food and growing up in Hawaii, I was lucky enough to get a more authentic taste of the East than most Americans do. But in Ellensburg I don't have many options to satisfy my cravings for the dish. I can only ant back.

One of my favorite dishes is a noodle dish called chow fun. What makes this dish are the extra wide rice noodles, called he fen or haw fun, that soak up all the flavor of the dish. So with the ingredients I could have here, I've made my own version of the classic Cantonese dish.

---

Culinary Corner: Chow Fun

Rachel Guerrero Culinary Columnist

Ingredients

- 8 oz. mung bean sprouts, about 4 cups, rinsed and drained well
- 1 lb. bok choy
- 1 lb. flank steak, well trimmed
- 2 T. soy sauce
- 3 T. cornstarch
- 2 T. black bean paste
- 2 lb. fresh Asian noodles
- 4 T. vegetable oil
- 1 1/2 tablespoon garlic, minced
- 1 tsp. kosher salt
- 4 scallions, cut into 2-inch sections
- 3 T. oyster sauce
- 3 Cups of water

Directions

1. Rinse wok and dry it thoroughly.
2. Heat a large wok or skillet over high heat. Add 1 T. oil to the wok and noodles, spreading them in the wok. Cook for 1 minute, or until slightly crusty. Add the bean sprouts and stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes. Return the bok choy and beef until the water is gone.
3. Add the bok choy for 30 seconds. Add the leaves and 15 to 30 seconds, until fragrant. Add the beef, spread out the bok choy, and stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes. Return the bok choy and beef until the water is gone.
4. Add the scallions, cut into 2-inch sections and stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes. Return the bok choy and beef until the water is gone.
5. Return the bok choy and beef until the water is gone.
6. Add the oyster sauce and stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes. Return the bok choy and beef until the water is gone.

***

Weather wars in the valley thunder on

I absolutely love Chinese food and growing up in Hawaii, I was lucky enough to get a more authentic taste of the East than most Americans do. But in Ellensburg I don't have many options to satisfy my cravings for the dish. I can only ant back.

One of my favorite dishes is a noodle dish called chow fun. What makes this dish are the extra wide rice noodles, called he fen or haw fun, that soak up all the flavor of the dish. So with the ingredients I could have here, I've made my own version of the classic Cantonese dish.

---

Culinary Corner: Chow Fun

Rachel Guerrero Culinary Columnist

Ingredients

- 8 oz. mung bean sprouts, about 4 cups, rinsed and drained well
- 1 lb. bok choy
- 1 lb. flank steak, well trimmed
- 2 T. soy sauce
- 3 T. cornstarch
- 2 T. black bean paste
- 2 lb. fresh Asian noodles
- 4 T. vegetable oil
- 1 1/2 tablespoon garlic, minced
- 1 tsp. kosher salt
- 4 scallions, cut into 2-inch sections
- 3 T. oyster sauce
- 3 Cups of water

Directions

1. Rinse wok and dry it thoroughly.
2. Heat a large wok or skillet over high heat. Add 1 T. oil to the wok and noodles, spreading them in the wok. Cook for 1 minute, or until slightly crusty. Add the bean sprouts and stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes. Return the bok choy and beef until the water is gone.
3. Add the bok choy for 30 seconds. Add the leaves and 15 to 30 seconds, until fragrant. Add the beef, spread out the bok choy, and stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes. Return the bok choy and beef until the water is gone.
4. Add the scallions, cut into 2-inch sections and stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes. Return the bok choy and beef until the water is gone.
5. Add the oyster sauce and stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes. Return the bok choy and beef until the water is gone.

***

Weather wars in the valley thunder on

I know it seems absurd to hold a grudge against something so unorthodox, but weather seriously pisses me off. Nothing raises my ire to boiling agitation faster than a raging wind blowing rain into my face as I stagger home from the bars at dark-thirty in February, people, not July, for god sakes. It's too hot, too cold, too windy, too this or that, the list is endless.

What baffles me lately, is seeing people walking around obliviously in shorts and T-shirts, as an early spring either. Punxsutawney Phil always sees his fat little shadow imprinted on the ground, spelling out tidings of six weeks more of in-ferral winter. Even if it was warm outside, the weather can change in the blink of an eye, so be smart and don't under-estimate your circumstances. It's better to be prepared than try to show the weather who's boss by wearing summer attire.

---

Weather wars in the valley thunder on

I absolutely love Chinese food and growing up in Hawaii, I was lucky enough to get a more authentic taste of the East than most Americans do. But in Ellensburg I don't have many options to satisfy my cravings for the dish. I can only ant back.

One of my favorite dishes is a noodle dish called chow fun. What makes this dish are the extra wide rice noodles, called he fen or haw fun, that soak up all the flavor of the dish. So with the ingredients I could have here, I've made my own version of the classic Cantonese dish.

---

Culinary Corner: Chow Fun

Rachel Guerrero Culinary Columnist

Ingredients

- 8 oz. mung bean sprouts, about 4 cups, rinsed and drained well
- 1 lb. bok choy
- 1 lb. flank steak, well trimmed
- 2 T. soy sauce
- 3 T. cornstarch
- 2 T. black bean paste
- 2 lb. fresh Asian noodles
- 4 T. vegetable oil
- 1 1/2 tablespoon garlic, minced
- 1 tsp. kosher salt
- 4 scallions, cut into 2-inch sections
- 3 T. oyster sauce
- 3 Cups of water

Directions

1. Rinse wok and dry it thoroughly.
2. Heat a large wok or skillet over high heat. Add 1 T. oil to the wok and noodles, spreading them in the wok. Cook for 1 minute, or until slightly crusty. Add the bean sprouts and stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes. Return the bok choy and beef until the water is gone.
3. Add the bok choy for 30 seconds. Add the leaves and 15 to 30 seconds, until fragrant. Add the beef, spread out the bok choy, and stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes. Return the bok choy and beef until the water is gone.
4. Add the scallions, cut into 2-inch sections and stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes. Return the bok choy and beef until the water is gone.
5. Add the oyster sauce and stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes. Return the bok choy and beef until the water is gone.

***

Weather wars in the valley thunder on

I know it seems absurd to hold a grudge against something so unorthodox, but weather seriously pisses me off. Nothing raises my ire to boiling agitation faster than a raging wind blowing rain into my face as I stagger home from the bars at dark-thirty in the morning. Wind and rain are a tag-team of devastation. Rain makes you appear to be a thorn in your side as long as you live on this planet. You can turn a light switch on and off, adjust the volume on your iPod, eat when you're hungry, but weather will always be a thorn in your side as long as you live on this planet. You can dress for it all you want, can turn a light switch on and off, adjust the volume on your iPod, eat when you're hungry, but weather will always be a thorn in your side as long as you live on this planet. You can dress for it all you want, but weather will always wear the pants.

---

Weather wars in the valley thunder on

I know it seems absurd to hold a grudge against something so unorthodox, but weather seriously pisses me off. Nothing raises my ire to boiling agitation faster than a raging wind blowing rain into my face as I stagger home from the bars at dark-thirty in the morning. Wind and rain are a tag-team of devastation. Rain makes you appear to be a thorn in your side as long as you live on this planet. You can turn a light switch on and off, adjust the volume on your iPod, eat when you're hungry, but weather will always be a thorn in your side as long as you live on this planet. You can dress for it all you want, can turn a light switch on and off, adjust the volume on your iPod, eat when you're hungry, but weather will always be a thorn in your side as long as you live on this planet. You can dress for it all you want, but weather will always wear the pants.

---

Weather wars in the valley thunder on

I know it seems absurd to hold a grudge against something so unorthodox, but weather seriously pisses me off. Nothing raises my ire to boiling agitation faster than a raging wind blowing rain into my face as I stagger home from the bars at dark-thirty in the morning. Wind and rain are a tag-team of devastation. Rain makes you appear to be a thorn in your side as long as you live on this planet. You can turn a light switch on and off, adjust the volume on your iPod, eat when you're hungry, but weather will always be a thorn in your side as long as you live on this planet. You can dress for it all you want, can turn a light switch on and off, adjust the volume on your iPod, eat when you're hungry, but weather will always be a thorn in your side as long as you live on this planet. You can dress for it all you want, but weather will always wear the pants.
A fter a long day at school, sisters Rowan Utzinger, age 7, and Willow Lowgen, age 4, come skipping into the pet center on North Pearl to visit some of their favorite Ellensburg pets. Rowan posts her elbows on the front counter and Willow, who is not quite tall enough rests her chin on the counter to say hello to Buddy, the African gray parrot.

The pet store is best known for Buddy, who is on business cards and the canvas out front of the store. Buddy, who is 22 years old, came with the store when Jackie Silva bought it four years ago. Being used to the hustle and bustle of business, Jackie decided that Buddy should stay in the store and be the official mascot.

"It is basically her store, and we just work here," Silva said.

There is a pet in the store that may be quite unfamiliar to some, Tai the bearded dragon. "Tai was given to us after she was found abandoned in an apartment," Silva said. "Last year she had 96 babies and we just sold the last one in November."

Down the road at 114 W. 4th St. at Fitterer's Furniture, there are two other feathered friends, Para and Keet. The two parakeets reside in Fitterer's and have been part of a long tradition. The parakeets have been there for about 15 years.

"They add a nice outdoor feel," Cheryl Krueger, business manager at Fitterer's said. "It is something else that the customer can relate to instead of just coming in to buy something."

Around the corner a bit on North Main Street at Bailey's Bibliomania is where customers can find a dog who is prone to tag along on the heels of her master. Employee Lisa Price works most of the afternoons alone at Bailey's; therefore she brings her 9-year-old Sheltie, Sushi, to keep her company.

"She is kind of the unofficial door greeter," Price said.

Similar is the story of Baxter, a four-year-old Abyssinian Guinea pig at the Ellensburg Pet Center located on North Pearl.

"He doesn't like to be left alone at home," Jackie Silva, owner of the local pet store said. "He is really friendly and always wants food."

When passing by the Main Street Market Antique Mall, also located on North Main Street, it is hard not to notice sad, droopy Labrador eyes staring out at the afternoon traffic from behind a window until someone opens the door. Gabe, the 7-year-old Labrador chow mix, is there to greet customers with his tie on and tail wagging.

"Gabe is our executive greeter, he wears a tie to work," Sandy Palmer, owner of Main Street Market Antique Mall said. "He has reactive attachment disorder where he can't be left alone, so my wife started bringing him to work."

While Gabe is friendly now, it took Deb Palmer two weeks to train Gabe how to greet customers politely, instead of barking at them.

Being a serious employee, Gabe comes to work each morning, dressed to impress, with different ties for different occasions. His best attire thus far is a red satin cummerbund with a bow tie which he parades around in during the week of New Year's.

According to Palmer, March's tie will likely be green in celebration of St. Patrick's Day.

Over at Boogie Man Music on West 3rd Avenue, people will see two yellow, narrow eyes looking back at them from the shadows. It is hard not to notice Mick, the 9-year-old cat, curled up with his round tummy hanging off the edge of the stool to left of the door.

Mick has been at Boogie Man Music for two years when owners Kevin and Ginger Fairfield had to bring him in the store because they couldn't have a cat in their new house.

However, do not be fooled by this sly character. While Mick may look like an ordinary cat, he is a huge ladies man.

"I was in there one afternoon with my friend and I was sitting there petting him," Emma Cook, sophomore undeclared major, said. "I stopped petting him for a minute and I felt this tap on my shoulder and he had put his paw on my shoulder kind of like nudging me to keep petting him."

Whether pets are in stores because they don't like being left alone at home, or because they add a different feel to the store environment, the concept is becoming very popular around town.

There is nothing like someone coming home after a long day of work, or even a student coming home for a weekend or break, and being greeted by their furry friend. With Ellensburg being a small, cozy town, these downtown mascots give back that feeling of home, which many people often miss.
OPEN MIC NIGHT at GRANT'S PIZZA PLACE

!! LIVE MUSIC!!

Wednesday's at 8pm

$1 Beers ALL NIGHT LONG! 4pm - 12am

716 E. University Way in Ellensburg • 925-9855
Potato-chili feed raises money for vets
by Ryan Ricigliano
Staff reporter

With the bitter cold of winter still lingering, Central Washington University students can be found seeking out warm meals within the Student Union and Recreation Center (SURC).

Yet, for those willing to traverse outside the boundaries of campus, the Center for Student Empowerment and the local Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) are putting on a chili and baked potato feed to raise money for soldiers.

The dinner, which will be held at 6 p.m. on Feb. 20 at the First Lutheran Church on 512 N. Ruby St., will feature homemade chili and endless baked potatoes, complete with all the dressings (butter, sour cream, bacon bits, cheese and chives).

Although the event is free to the public, donations are encouraged to help support the local VFW.

"This is an event aimed at getting word out to veterans on campus about the services available to them and enhancing the vet-friendly atmosphere here on campus," said Michelle Cyrus, assistant director for non-traditional student programs.

The dinner, which will be held at 6 p.m. on Feb. 20 at the First Lutheran Church on 512 N. Ruby St., will feature homemade chili and endless baked potatoes, complete with all the dressings (butter, sour cream, bacon bits, cheese and chives).

Cyrus and the Disability Support Services (DSS) Center are helping to put the event together on the campus end of things. The student club, Access, Belonging, Learning, and Empowerment (A.B.L.E.), will be providing volunteers for the dinner.

"Our club is involved because the disability rights movement started with veterans of the Vietnam War," said Carolyn Cheung, junior nutrition major and president of A.B.L.E.

Ian Campbell, assistant director of the DSS Center and A.B.L.E. advisor, feels that this event also allows them to give back to the community.

"As contributing citizens of the United States we have a moral responsibility to reach out to these veterans," Campbell said.

From the community spectrum, Veterans of Foreign Wars Commander Gene Ketzenburg will help to coordinate the VFW's involvement.

"We want to let young students on campus know that we don't just sit around and that we are active in the community, helping families and supporting vets," Ketzenburg said.

Ketzenburg, a veteran of the Vietnam War, is actively involved with helping and assisting other veterans in Ellensburg and throughout Kittitas County.

His stories of generosity range from helping to pay bills for a young soldier's family to putting together scholarships for local youths.

Together with Don Morris, another patron of the VFW, the two lobbied for the city of Ellensburg to erect a veteran's memorial in a local park. The park, Veteran's Memorial Park, had its name changed to Memorial Park during the Vietnam War and Ketzenburg thought it was time to properly honor these veterans.

It's this philanthropic spirit that has inspired Ketzenburg to put on another fundraiser aimed at giving back: the chili feed. The donations procured at the door will be used to buy sweatpants and sweatshirts, along with any other clothing needed, for veterans domestic and abroad. Money will also be used to create more care packages sent to soldiers fighting overseas.

This past Christmas, Ketzenburg and the local VFW sent 1,900 care packages to soldiers in Iraq and Afghanistan.

"We send over stuff they can't get - stuff we take for granted," Ketzenburg said. "Let's put it this way little tubes of toothpaste at the stores over there are almost $9, so every month we try to send three tubes of toothpaste and a toothbrush."

Yet, for Ketzenburg one of the most important aspects to making a difference starts right here at home. He continually comes back to the students and how much he believes in the value of an education.

Ketzenburg believes it vital that there be a link between veterans, the community and the college.

"I think they are doing a great job [at the college] and are trying to get word out about more things available," Ketzenburg said. "There are a lot of good programs and we are there to educate these young vets."

---

The Scoop

Jazz Combo Nite
Rectal Hall
7 p.m.

Chamber Orchestra Concert
Concert Hall
4 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Malcom X
SURC Theatre
7 p.m. FREE

Open Mic Night
SURC Pit
7 p.m. FREE

February 19-26

---

Central Washington University

 gly Business

---

We accept all competitors coupons!

---

Ellensburg Chevrolet

509-525-3111 / 1008 Canyon Road Ellensburg, WA

---

Central Washington University

---

CWU ALERT

The winter quarter system test will be TODAY, February 19, at 12:00 noon. Expect phones to ring and Desktop Alert to be activated!
Oak Rail hosts bikini contest

by Amber Ramento
Staff reporter

Girls will be taking the stage in their bikinis at 11 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 19 at the Oak Rail Tavern. Judges will be present and the crowd will be taking part by cheering for the girls they like. Only one girl will walk away with the $300 prize.

This will be the Oak Rail’s second year hosting the Bikini Contest. The contest is sponsored by Pebble Beach Tanning. Unlike last year, there will be a $3 cover charge to get into the Oak Rail, located at 301 N. Pearl St. Domestic beers will be $3 each.

Pebble Beach Tanning will be providing spray tan for the girls in the contest, free tanning slips, and lotion samples and shirts to throw to the crowd. They will also be donating half of the cash prize and the free tanning prize (yet to be determined).

Last year there were only 12 girls that participated. This year there are already 15 participants. Participants could sign up until Feb. 15 and must be 21 years or older.

Last year, the contest was judged by the crowd, but this year two judges will be added, one provided by Pebble Beach Tanning and one provided by the Oak Rail along with the rest of the crowd.

“This is the first year that the Cuervo Girls will be at the contest,” Tina Little, Oak Rail employee, said.

The Cuervo Girls are a group that helps promote Jose Cuervo tequila.

The contest participants are asked to pick a song they would like to be introduced with, then are judged on looks, personality and how they present themselves.

“The best part about doing this is the crowd,” said Haley Weston, Oak Rail employee. “Last year we had about 500 people in here.”

People involved claim that last year, the event took place on a Saturday night and was a complete hit. This year, the event will be on a Thursday night. Everyone involved hopes that with the Cuervo girls, it will be just as fun.

“The best part is spray tanning all the girls and watching them get excited and nervous,” Shannon Wall, Pebble Beach Tanning owner, said. “I was also worried that we weren’t going to find any pretty girls, but they were all just gorgeous.”
Central celebrates black history month

by Amy Thompson
Staff reporter

Throughout February there are interactive and special events taking place on the Central Washington University campus in honor of Black History Month.

Well-known guest speakers, memoir displays, and questionnaire opportunities are among the events.

“The Dialogue Project” also known as “Speed RACING” will take place at 7 p.m. on Feb. 24 in the Student Union and Recreation Center (SURC) Ballroom.

The event is an hour-long session where people sit with other students for three minutes and have the opportunity to ask them questions. Everyone is invited to participate.

“It’s a project where we are engaging groups in dialogue,” Marian Lien, director of the Diversity Education Center, said. “People are prompted to ask questions about race and identity. They can ask anything and everything about race and cultures without feeling embarrassed. It’s an educational experience.

There will be a panel discussion on race and identity at 7 p.m. on Feb. 25 in the SURC Theatre to follow up and take a more in-depth look at presented questions. The panel, which consists of approximately 20 students, will answer anonymously submitted questions regarding race and identity.

The panel discussion will cover a number of topics, including but not limited to sexual orientation, identity and multicultural questions, according to Tony Poland, senior sociology and ethics major and student programmer for the Diversity Education Center.

“I think it’s important to bring a project like this to Central because I think there are a lot of questions that need to be answered, but people may not ask them because they feel it’s inappropriate,” Poland said.

In partnership with the Diversity Education Center, nine campus organizations have invited Talib Kweli and Jeff Chang to Central.

Kweli is a popular rap artist and Chang is a well-known hip-hop journalist. The panel will begin at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Feb. 26 in the SURC Ballroom. Kweli and Chang will discuss race, religion, and politics.

Admission is free, however tickets are limited. People may retrieve tickets in SURC room 253.

In addition to the events around campus, during the month of February there will be a display of documents and memorabilia shown across the hall on the second floor of the SURC to honor black history.

On March 6, an event called “Showtime at the McConnel” at 7 p.m. in the McConnel Auditorium will honor Black History Month. This event is an opportunity for students to bring a program like this to Central.

“W e ’ r e all making history still today,” said Anthony Peterson, senior law and justice and sociology double major and co-president to the Black Student Union. “I like the fact that people are getting together to celebrate American history, just informing people. February has been dedicated to honoring black history since 1976.

Dr. Carter G. Woodson, the father of Black History Month, first established the idea in 1915, according to an article found on the Association for the Study of African American Life and History Web site.

Carter chose the month of February in part because it is the birth month of prominent historical figures: Frederick Douglass and Abraham Lincoln.

‘Running the taps’ gains glory, T-shirt

Matt Robinson
Special to Observer

What if someone were to tell you that the cost for glory is $35? It feels great to achieve great achievements is running the taps at the Oak Rail. Basically, it’s both a promotion and a fun thing for customers,” said Tina Little, a bartender at the Oak Rail.

Running the taps consists of drinking a glass of all 11 beers the Oak Rail has on tap, in one night.

Not only is it a challenging way to get smashed, but essentially you’re drinking about two of those beers for free, with the price break.

“Running the taps” started about two years ago to attract more customers, and it’s been successful.

Everyone who runs the taps gets a card with their name on it posted on the wall of the bar, and to date, over 200 people have completed the feat. Champions of the taps also receive a free T-shirt.

In fact, they have three different colored T-shirts for repeat “champions.”

Several customers have come back to repeat since I’ve worked here,” Little notes.

“I can barely remember what happened that night,” said recent CWU graduate Joshua Greisen, who successfully ran the taps last year. “It took them a month for them to get me the T-shirt, but it was definitely worth it, I think.”

However, running the taps is not for everyone.

Eleven beers in one night is a rough terrain to conquer for the soft-livered.

The bar will not hesitate to cut you off if you’re not holding your booze, and if you don’t have a designated driver, you don’t run the taps.

Yes, with glory comes responsibility.

“You can’t drive if you’re going to run the taps,” Little said.

While running the taps may hold a special achievement, other bars around town use unique promotions as well.

For instance, the Starlight Lounge gives a 50 percent discount on well drinks and draft beers on Tuesday nights, and the Horseshoe is holding a beer pong tournament ($20 entrance fee) on March 4.

If strapped for cash, there are still a lot of ways to make a trip downtown a relatively thrifty and exceedingly fun one.

Sure, some parties have keg cups for $5, and $30 packs of Busch are less than $15, but remember one question: Where is the glory?
Mel’s Hole is nowhere to be found. Apparently, neither is Mel. Legend has it the bottomless hole on Manastash Ridge in Kittitas, emits black rays of light and causes transcendental vision tubes that never explod­ed or made the sound of hitting bot­tom will never come. Animals won’t go near it, yet people have searched for it for years. The hole is even rumored to reanimate the dead.

“Could this be an apocry­phal story, but one guy claims he threw his departed canine down into the hole,” Mel Waters told radio host Art Bell more than a decade ago. “And he said the dog actually came back to life.” Since his first call into Bell’s paranormal radio pro­gram Coast to Coast AM in 1997, Wat­ers has reported the discovery of the world’s deepest hole where supernatural properties has exploded into a nationwide urban legend that flourishes to­day.

Last November, Travel and Leisure magazine named Mel’s Hole one of the top 10 most mysterious places in America. “If we pursue it the most perfect myth in the state of Wash­ington,” said Charlotte LeFevre, the director of the Seattle Museum of Mysteries and a board member of the Seattle UFO and Paranormal Group, which has searched for the hole several times. “If it does exist, it’s not looking very unusual.” As Waters describes it, Mel’s Hole stretches nine feet wide, plunges more than 15 miles deep and is surrounded by a three-foot high retaining wall. He claims locals have known about the hole for years, using it as a mystical dumping ground for dead and diseased cattle, rusty refrigerators, and truckloads of junk with no place else to go. “It’s an attractive nuisance,” Waters told Bell. “You wouldn’t want local kids climbing on the wall and fall­ing in.”

After tossing in several tele­vision tubes that never explod­ed or made the sound of hitting bottom, Waters said he lowered down weighted fishing line to gage the hole’s depth. Yet after sinking 15 miles of line, Waters claims it never hit bottom, making Mel’s Hole’s nearly twice the depth of the world’s deepest known hole - the eight-mile Kola Superdeep Borehole in Russia, nicknamed the “Well to Hell.”

In 2003 MTV featured the borehole on the “Urban Leg­ends” episode “Is there a Hole to Hell?” alongside footage of Thorp-based inter-tribal medi­cine man Red Elk discussing Mel’s Hole. Red Elk claimed to have seen the hole as a child more than 40 years ago, and said that it was a vent for Mount Rainier. Marie Ferland, a professor of geology at Cen­tral Washington University, said there’s little scient­i­fick likelihood that such a hole exists. Though some claim it’s a lava tube left from Mount Rainier, Ferland said those are usually fairly horizontal features, not vertical ones.

“Certain types of rock dis­solve easily because of their chem­istry,” Ferland said. “That’s not the kind of rock that we have here in Ellensburg.”

Ferland said that the hole could possibly exist as an aban­doned mine shaft, but that it’s reported depth was unlikely that far down. Waters’ fishing line would’ve melted from the earth’s heat.

“From a scientist’s stand­point, it’s not worth trying to explain something unless we know it exists,” Ferland said. In 1987, the Tri-City Herald reported that Waters was not a registered tax payer, and that Ellensburg authorities were unable to find evidence of such a residence. Waters, a self-pro­claimed Willie Nelson-looking, has yet to go public.

Ten years and 10,237 posts later, the moderator of the Mel’s Hole Web site wrote that unless Waters came forward, the search for the hole had reached an official dead end.

“It’s time to come clean Mel.” Once and for all,” the post said.

LeFevre said that Waters and his nephew have contact­ed the Seattle UFO and Para­normal Group several times over the years. “He’s a smart guy. He’s using a variation of a real name,” LeFe­vre said. “When you give away your name on a national radio show you lose your privacy.”

LeFevre said they’ve also received independent reports of the hole from locals who’ve never heard of Mel. When the Seattle group began research­ing the claims on the Web, they discovered blacked-out areas on satellite images directly over the hole’s reported location - first on Terraserver, and second on Google Satellite Images, spurring stories of government and military involvement.

The group has made sev­eral pilgrimages to Manastash Ridge in search of the hole, but hasn’t found it. LeFevre said, the site itself could be an archaeological and geological find, even if the group can’t verify the hole’s paranormal properties.

“There were many seeds of the story that checked out,” LeFevre said. “If we ran across a hoax we would no longer pursue it.”

Laura Appleton, professor of sociology at Central, said the pursuit of Mel’s Hole isn’t that different from other religious pursuits that defy scientific logic.

“People scoff, and say that those people are weirdos,” Apple­ton said. “Everyone says ‘How can you believe that?’ But others could say that turn­ing water into wine is pretty wacky too.”

Waters reappeared on Bell’s radio show several times, with tales of government pay-offs, kidnapping, an Australian wombat rescue, and a sec­ond hole in Nevada. Waters claimed to have lowered a live sheep into the Nevada hole, only for it to resurface saturated with “a baby seal-like entity” with human eyes wriggling out of its internal organs. Waters said the creature healed him of esophageal cancer.

Though Waters’ existence is the subject of debate, and his current whereabouts are unknown, he may return to Ell­ensburg one last time.

“If you had a fatal disease Mel, would you jump into the hole?” Art Bell asked.

“I would,” Waters said. “You would? Just based on the dog story?”

“It is in my will that if I meet my demise ... that I would be disposed of into the well.”

---

Roadfever rocks towards finding a cure

by Matthew Hartmann

Staff reporter

The 2nd annual Concert for a Cure is taking place tomor­row at the Moose Lodge in downtown Ellensburg. Concert for a Cure is a ben­e­fit concert sponsored by the Central Washington Univer­sity Chemistry Club to raise awareness and funds for can­cer research. Stephen Bryner, graduate student biochemistry special­ization, came up with the idea for Concert for a Cure last year. “We asked a group of students to come up with a project for which they thought had potential and interest. That’s the idea for the concert,” Bryner said.

Bryner said that what in­spired her was her mother’s four bouts with cancer, includ­ing one in which her mother almost passed away. According to Bryner the event is free to everyone in the community but that everyone that wishes to make a donation to the American Cancer Society should feel free to do so.

The band playing at the event will be Roadfever. Roadfever consists of many different members including Chemistry Lab Manager Tony Brown, guitarist. Brown said that he had high hopes for this year’s benefit. “I’m pretty excited about this event. The benefit is at 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. Friday, Feb. 20.”

Bryner said that she hopes that this year is successful and that it should be a fun time.
by Adrian Acosta
Staff reporter

The Central Washington University women’s basketball team won their second straight game against the Alaska Nanooks Thursday night.

The overtime thriller ended at 89-85. Senior Stephanie Wenke scored 29 points, tying her career high.

Wenke had no problem shooting from beyond the arc, going 6 of 8. Six of Wenke’s 29 points occurred in overtime.

It looked as if Central had the game in the bag, when senior Hilary Tanneberg, hit two free throws to give Central a three-point lead with seven seconds left. However, Alaska’s Sheena Brown hit a three-pointer at the buzzer to send it into overtime.

Only five of Alaska’s eight players were able to score. Ronisha Edwards had 25 points and 11 rebounds.

With only seven players dressed for the game, the Wildcats had to play with a lot of intensity.

Junior forward, Shaina Afoa and senior center, Hilary Tanneberg each had a double-double. Afoa had 14 points to go along with her 11 boards, while Tanneberg had 22 points and 14 rebounds.

After coming into the half with a one-point 39-38 lead, the Wildcats shot poorly from the field, shooting a mere 37.5 percent. However, thanks to their perfect free throw shooting, and solid shooting from three-point range, they were able to hang in there.

The Wildcats also hit a season-high 13 three pointers.

With this victory, the Wildcats move to 5-15 overall, and 2-7 in Great Northwest Athletic Conference (GNAC) play.

On Valentine’s Day the women’s basketball team lost to Alaska Anchorage, ending the Wildcats’ two-game winning streak.

The Seawolves have won 21 straight games, and are coming off a narrow 70-67 victory against Western Washington.

Central took the lead early on, when senior guard Stephanie Wenke drained the opening bucket, but Alaska Anchorage went on a 10-3 run to help give them momentum.

Senior guard Tanna Radtke led the Wildcats with 15 points, and four rebounds. Hilary Tanneberg had one rebound shy of a double-double, with 12 points, and nine boards.

Alaska was able to play 14 players Saturday night, with 10 of them playing at least 14 minutes. This may have been a disadvantage to the Wildcats who played with seven players, averaging almost 20 minutes each, and four players with more than 30 minutes in the game.

One of the reasons for the Wildcats 28 point loss was the terrible shooting in the second half. The Wildcats shot 19.4 percent from the field, going 6 of 31. The loss moves the Wildcats to 5-16, and 2-8 in GNAC play. They are at the bottom of the GNAC standings, with Alaska Fairbanks 0-11 in conference play.

The Wildcats will host St. Martin’s Wednesday, Feb. 18 at Nicholson Pavilion.

Freshman forward Sophie Russell goes up for a reverse lay-in against the Vikings. Russell finished with just three points and Central lost to rival Western Washington Vikings 72-82.
Softball starts league play at home

by Laura Mittleider
Staff reporter

The weekend of Feb. 5, the Wildcat softball team started off their season at Chico State with a 6-3 win. This was the third win of the season opener in the last six years.

"We played five games in California which was good," said Head Coach Gary Frederick.

The cancellation of the Feb. 6 games due to heavy rain, the lady Wildcats had a day off, before heading into the rest of the tournament.

The Wildcats were scheduled to face Davis University from Virginia and Elkins College from California.

The Wildcats played a double-header on Feb. 7 against Cal State Dominguez Hill with a 2-4 loss and Cal State Stanislaus with a 4-6 loss which gave the ladies a 1-2 record.

Senior shortstop Liz Wallace supplied the team with a double in both games and Danielle Monson had two of Central's five hits during the games against California State University Stanislaus.

"We are doing really well. We struggled a little, but we took good lessons from that."

Jackie Hawkins
Second base/Outfielder

Central Baseball team stagnant

by Satoshi Hasegawa
Staff reporter

The baseball team of California State University Stanislaus completely shut down the Central baseball team.

The Wildcats lost the first four games of the 2009 season against the Warriors throughout last weekend with scores of: 0-6, 1-5, 5-7 and 4-11.

The Wildcats had just seven hits in the two games on Feb. 13.

The players were tired from the long bus ride to California which affected the Central offense.

In the opener of the 2009 baseball season, Central had just three hits by senior outfielder A.J. Gosney, junior catcher Joe Schuster, and junior Michael Johnson who was pinch-hitter in the ninth inning against Warrior starter Spencer Snodgrass.

In the second game, the Wildcats had four hits.

Out of the total hits for the day, Gosney had two hits [a total of three hits for the day] and two steals. In Central's defense, Wildcat senior starting pitcher Derek Shoemaker had some early control problems in his 2009 debut on Friday.

He walked five batters combined in the second and third innings, before settling down. The Wildcats had four errors, compared to one of the Warriors' defense.

But the defense could not stop the Warriors' hitters.

Central sophomore starting pitcher Lake Millbauer lost four of his pitching innings and junior left-hand pitcher, Tyler Ware, threw for four innings and lost three.

In the second game, junior Kevin Walkenhauer, freshman Thomas Burnett, and freshman Ryan Tarver threw and allowed the Warriors to score 11.

The Wildcats carried on their 10-game, nine-day trip with two games at Sonoma State, which were canceled due to rain. After the last series against Dixie State College on Feb 18 and 19, the Wildcats are returning to Ellensburg.

They will take a week long break and get ready for the CWU invitational beginning Friday, Feb. 27 and ending March 1.

The Wildcats will host two teams, Saint Martin's and Western Oregon to come play in the invitation.
Wildcat men split two games

For the third straight game, senior forward Brandon Foote led the men’s basketball team in scoring and the Wildcats won their fourth game in a row, 86-66 over the Northwest Nazarene Crusaders on Thursday night at the Johnson Sports Center in Nampa, Idaho.

With the win, Central completed a season sweep of the Crusaders.

The win moved the Wildcats to 14-4 overall and 8-2 in the Great Northwest Athletic Conference (GNAC), while the Crusaders lost their sixth straight game and fell to 10-10 overall and 2-8 in the GNAC.

Foote scored 15 points and added four rebounds and all Central Washington players scored in the blowout victory.

Giovonne Woods, senior guard, finished with 12 points and a game-high of seven rebounds, while fellow guards Jon Clift and Colton Monti scored 10 points apiece.

Offensively, the Wildcats were lights out from the floor, shooting 56.1 percent, which was their best shooting effort ever. Senior guard Giovonne Woods also out-rebounded NNU by 31 rebounds compared to the Crusaders’ 23 boards.

NNU came into the game boasting the league’s best free throw percentage, but Central outshot them from the charity stripe as well, making 77.8 percent of their attempts compared to the Crusaders’ 70.8 percent.

After a back and forth battle for the first eight minutes of the game, the Wildcats scored 10 straight points to take a 25-15 lead and they never looked back.

They held a 38-33 advantage at halftime, and their lead never slipped below five points.

Central pushed their lead to 10 points after halftime and maintained it until a late surge by the Wildcats, put the game out of reach. Central turned a nine-point lead at the 6:40 mark into a 21-point cushion with 3:12 left to play thanks to a 14 to 2 run.

In addition to their advantage shooting the ball, Central also out-rebounded NNU by 31 rebounds compared to the Crusaders’ 23 boards.

The Wildcats also overcame the effects of a career-high 33 points from Crusader sophomore Brian Barkdoll, who accounted for half of his team’s points by making 13 of 18 shots from the field.

The Wildcats, who were ranked fourth in the NCAA Division II West Region this week, continued their three-game road trip on Saturday at Saint Martin’s in Lacey.

The game was a tale of two halves.

Central started off the game on a 14 to 1 run and used another 9 to 0 run to push their lead to 31-13 with six minutes left in the first half.

After a seesaw battle to finish the half, the Wildcats came out with a 44-32 lead.

Undeterred, the Saints came out in the second half and cut the lead to eight points in just five minutes, and three minutes later the lead was cut down to four.

“We could feel the game slipping away,” Monti said.

“It really hurt having our guys in foul trouble. That’s what really changed the game.”

The Wildcats were crippled by foul trouble.

Four separate Central players fouled out of the game, including the three out of the five players that started the game, leaving the reserves to try and mount a comeback in the final minutes.

With 7:14 left in the game, the Wildcats held a 66-60 advantage, but a 16 to 3 run by the Saints gave them a 76-69 lead with a little over two minutes to play.

Saint Martin’s superb free throw shooting - they hit 7 of 8 in the final 45 seconds - sealed the victory.

Senior guard Colton Monti scored a career-high 24 points in the final game in his hometown and Brandon Foote added 20 points and three steals.

Woods chipped in with 16 points, but no other Wildcats had more than seven points.

Senior center Bill Richardson added 22 points for the Saints and three other players finished with seven points.

The Wildcats finish their three-game road trip this weekend, traveling to Monmouth to take on Western Oregon on Thursday, Feb. 19.

They are then at home for three games, Feb. 26 against Alaska Anchorage, Feb. 28 against Alaska, and finally March 5, against Montana State Billings.

After playing three games at home, the Wildcats have just one game left, at rival Western Washington on March 7 – the last game before the NCAA Division II West Regional begins on March 13.
Track and field athletes gain awards

by James Anderson
Asst. sports editor

Winning an automatic mark means she has thrown so well in the regular season, she has automatically reserved her spot in the national conference indoor championships which are the weekend of March 13 in Houston, Texas.

"We believe we have got some outstanding athletes." – Kevin Adkisson, Head Coach

The next track and field event include the GNAC Indoor Track & Field Championships in Nampa, Idaho on the weekend of Feb. 20.

1/3 lb. CERTIFIED ANGUS MUSHROOM SWISS BURGER $4.88
Be there!!!
BOXCAR BURGERS
1201 S CANYON ROAD • 509-925-5151

Weight Training for your Health!

Get pumped! Saturday, February 21st
Location: Ellensburg High School Auxiliary Gym
1203 E Capitol Ave, Ellensburg
Guest Speaker: Rob Oviatt, M.S., CSCS
Former Washington State University Head Strength and Conditioning Coach and Hall of Fame member

8:30 am. Breakfast/Refreshments
9:00 am. Welcome by Ken Kladnik, Director of Kittitas Valley Physical Therapy
9:05 am. Weight Training Talk: Rob Oviatt
10:45 – 10:55 Small group weight training instruction

FREE ADMISSION and open to the public
Call 509-962-7386 to register!

KVCH Kittitas Valley Physical Therapy
Men’s lacrosse shoots for the goal

by Drew Ritchie
Staff reporter

The 20th-ranked men’s lacrosse club is ready to start this season after practicing three to four days a week and going to meetings, or “chalk talks”, once a week to review plays.

Coming off the best season in school history having made the playoffs for the first time ever, expectations are high as they look to go deeper into the playoffs.

“We are 20th in the nation right now,” said Earl Gerlach, the club vice president and junior goaltender. “If we are going to make a run, it’s going to be this year.”

Kellen Gallacher, club president and senior defender, said, “We are predicted to finish second in the league, but I think we will win the league.”

Last season, Central posted a 7-2 record. However, they fell short in the playoffs, falling in the first round to Whitman College in Walla Walla in overtime.

The team is led by fifth year senior Kevin Norris, an all-conference attacker. Last year he was tied for the team leader with 27 goals, and led the team with 40 points while dishing out 13 assists. He averaged 3.38 goals per game, 1.63 assists per game and 5 points per game.

The new season brings a new coach, Chris Johnson, along with a new mentality.

Their first game is at 3 p.m. on Saturday Feb. 21 against Willamette at Whitman (Walla Walla).

Their first home game will be an exhibition game at 1 p.m. against Seattle University on Saturday March 14.

The club plays in the Pacific Northwest Collegiate Lacrosse League (PN-CLL). In this league, they play teams from a variety of places, such as Montana, British Columbia, Oregon, Washington and Idaho.

As far as fundraisers are concerned, they are not doing any at the moment. The team is just using funds from the team dues.

If anyone is interested in playing lacrosse, they can contact the president, Gallacher, at GallacherK@cwu.edu.

Software to build and maintain your site: ($ hundreds)

- Adobe Photoshop
- Web editor/Dream Weaver
- Image mapping software, i.e. MapEdit
- Adobe Acrobat Professional

Training your office staffer to maintain your site: ($ thousands)

- CWU Web standards
- ADA compliance standards
- CWU graphics standards
- Application software training

Training your NEXT office staffer to maintain your site: ($ thousands)

- CWU Web standards
- ADA compliance standards
- CWU graphics standards
- Application software training

Having the CWU Web Development office create and maintain your site, creating an opportunity for CWU students to increase their professional Web development skills, and allowing your office staff to focus on their primary duties, all at a reasonable cost: PRICELESS!!

Find out how the CWU Web Development office can lower your web costs and decrease turnaround time. Call Jesse at 963-2810, or email daysj@cwu.edu.

A web site management task that can take our staff the better part of a day to figure out usually takes the Web Office ten minutes. Not a good use of our time.”

Bruce Porter
Director, Business Services & Contracts

The Central Washington University lacrosse club players practice in the field house to get ready for their next tournament. The lacrosse team is coming off their best season ever, where they made it to the playoffs.

Software to build and maintain your site: ($ hundreds)

- Adobe Photoshop
- Web editor/Dream Weaver
- Image mapping software, i.e. MapEdit
- Adobe Acrobat Professional

Training your office staffer to maintain your site: ($ thousands)

- CWU Web standards
- ADA compliance standards
- CWU graphics standards
- Application software training

Training your NEXT office staffer to maintain your site: ($ thousands)

- CWU Web standards
- ADA compliance standards
- CWU graphics standards
- Application software training

Having the CWU Web Development office create and maintain your site, creating an opportunity for CWU students to increase their professional Web development skills, and allowing your office staff to focus on their primary duties, all at a reasonable cost: PRICELESS!!

Find out how the CWU Web Development office can lower your web costs and decrease turnaround time. Call Jesse at 963-2810, or email daysj@cwu.edu.

A web site management task that can take our staff the better part of a day to figure out usually takes the Web Office ten minutes. Not a good use of our time.”

Bruce Porter
Director, Business Services & Contracts

The Central Washington University lacrosse club players practice in the field house to get ready for their next tournament. The lacrosse team is coming off their best season ever, where they made it to the playoffs.
NEW! 2009 Honda Fit 5-Speed Manual

$14,950

or ONLY

$188

per mo. plus tax

20-month lease payments of $188 plus tax, with option to purchase at end of term. $1,990 drive off cost due at lease signing. 12,000 miles per year, subject to credit approval. Week #37630

NEW! 2009 Honda CR-V LX 4WD

$239

per mo. plus tax

166-hp, DOHC i-VTEC®

4-cylinder Engine, 5-Speed Automatic, Vehicle Stability Assist™ with Traction Control, ABS, Dual-threshold Front Airbags, Side Curtain Airbags with Roller Sensor, MPS/Acceleration Input Jack, Speed Sensitive Volume Control, 4WD/40/40 Reclining Rear Seatbacks w/Center Pass-Through, and MUCH MORE!

25-month lease payments of $239 plus tax, with option to purchase at end of term. $2,790 drive off cost due at lease signing. 12,000 miles per year, subject to credit approval. Week #39950

* Based on 2009 EPA mileage estimates, reflecting new EPA test procedure beginning with 2008 models. Use for comparison purposes only. Do not compare to models before 2008. Your actual mileage will vary depending on how you drive and maintain your vehicle.