LIBRARY NEWS

At the end of September, 2008, Linda Busch, administrative assistant to the library's dean, retired. For those of us who worked with Linda during the last decade, her retirement represents a great loss. For her, no job was too long or too hard to do. Linda is looking forward to spending more time with her family, and we wish her all the rewards of retirement that she so richly deserves.

Until the appointment of a permanent new dean of the library, head cataloguer Dan CannCasciato will serve as the library's department chair under Interim Senior Administrator Dennis Defa, associate vice-president for faculty relations. Currently, the library is conducting a program review and will use information from the first half of that process, now almost complete, to help in recruiting a new dean. The full review will aid the librarians in planning for the future.

In late spring, 2008, the library and the Friends cooperated in making and framing a poster based on the illustration in last year's fund-raising brochure. That poster now hangs on the east wall of the Brooks Library reference room.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Colleges and universities should burn down their libraries. Since "all the books in the world are already digitized," there's no need for "air-conditioning" them in our expensive buildings and ever-expanding collections.

Such was the advice of Adrian Sannier, Chief Technology Officer for Arizona State University, in his keynote address to the Campus Technology Conference in August, 2008. His remarks provoked numerous retorts that provide libraries' Friends with a reasoned defense against "technophiles and bibliophobes."

Librarians doubt that all books in the world will ever be digitized. And even if they were, how can we satisfy the student who finds a book online but wants to read the print version? (Yes, that happens.) Moreover, libraries exist to support research as well as education. In many fields, the creation of knowledge cannot occur by simply accessing the Internet.

At least one study notes that as more scholarly articles become available online, the number cited, particularly in the sciences, decreases. Online publications seem to have "accelerate[d] consensus and narrow[ed] the range of findings and ideas grappled with by scholars." Conversely, print-dependent research encourages the browsing that leads to "broader comparisons and scholarship."

In his talk, Sannier was concerned to keep the U. S. competitive in the world of learning by adopting the most up-to-date and economically efficient technology. Ironically, his approach to libraries might do just the opposite.

NOVEMBER 5, 2008

We'll need the help of many Friends of the Library to sell the large inventory of books about art, travel, history, literature and much, much more.

MEETING DETAILS

Dale Comstock's talk will be held at the Rodeo City Bar-B-Q. The cost of the buffet luncheon will be $12, including tax and gratuity. Because a Friend of the Library will be collecting the money for your lunch, please be prepared to pay with cash or check only.

At the beginning of summer, 2008, Dale's vacation took him to South America, where he visited the ancient Inca capital of Cuzco and the world heritage site of Machu Picchu. The highlight of the trip was a cruise to the Galapagos Islands. Dale reports that he snapped about 1000 photos, and he will share a small portion of that treasure with us at the luncheon.

NEWS FROM THE FRIENDS

We welcome donations for the Friends of the Library book sales. If you want to contribute, please contact Pat Owens (963-1306) in the library. Over the last several years, we have discovered a lot about our customers' preferences. Fiction, particularly of the belles lettres variety, sells very well, as do books on travel, cooking, and current events. Right now, we are very low on children's literature, so if your children and grandchildren can spare them, consider donating their books. At this time, we are not accepting any more encyclopedias; we still have a backlog of sets.
