QUESTIONNAIRE FOR STUDENTS AND FACULTY

To Determine Social Composition of Teaching Profession.

The class in types of industry and occupation under the direction of Mrs. Dodge last week presented to the entire Normal school, faculty and students including those who are out doing practice teaching, a questionnaire for the purpose of determining the "social composition of the teaching population" in a group which may be called fairly representative.

The questionnaire follows:

Word From Practice Teachers

—Improving Opportunities

Should our Ellensburg classes lock in on our rural center this morning and see the whole teachers eagerly reading the lately arrived Student Opinion, they would rest assured that we in Yakima county think often of Ellensburg Normal school and are vitally interested in all news from our Alma Mater.

We are fast learning "how to do it" by actually doing it and it is much interesting to note the rise and fall of one's pet theories.

Miss Stuart makes it possible for us to make trips to various points of interest. One afternoon we visited a nearby apple packing house and there we were escorted through the entire building and treated to luscious red apples on the way. Those of us who are strangers in the valley, watched with interest the rapid packing in progress all the time.

The following Saturday afternoon devoted our girls at the beet-sugar factory and we now understand in part at least, the mystery of converting raw beets into fine white sugar.

Last week we attended institute at North Yakima as part of our regular work: not the least interesting part of this was the luncheon at the Commercial Hotel; at this place instructors, former students and practice teachers of Ellensburg Normal enjoyed a jolly hour together.

Mrs. Wallace William gave a very energetic and stirring plea for internationalism. She made an excellent suggestion to teachers who wish to give the children a little of the meaning of internationalism, i.e. to suggest that they design a flag which should be honored alike by all nations after the war; a new, broader, better attitude than "my flag" namely "our flag," the flag of the world; a flag which stands eternally as the symbol of human brotherhood. She said in a school where it had been discussed that one child had suggested that the center of interest of the design be a circle. This obviously to be the symbol of the joined hands of all nations.

This ideal of the reconstruction period which must follow this world struggle, ought to be considered by every teacher: for upon her children too young now to take active part rests the tremendous problem of readjustment after the war.

Conditions which we can scarcely now foresee.

It should be the teachers' aim too, that all young citizens should be made to feel the higher responsibility that will come when patriotism shall have yielded its place to internationalism.

Want to see some real live teaching? Stroll out to be Damman school and see what Cornelia Morgan, Eva Gilbert, Emma Crego, Florence Teney, Myrtle Nelson, Doris Buren and Anna Hickey are doing under Miss Busby's supervision.

These girls consider themselves very fortunate in having Miss Busby for their supervisor, her untiring efforts having made it the success that it is.

Already each girl is teaching at least three classes daily. Myrtle Nelson has started a knitting class and Florence Teney is organizing a basketball club for the girls. Emma Crego is going to start a class for "first aid." Doris Buren has had charge of art and music classes, and Anita Hickey has been teaching primary hand work.

But teaching does not take up all the time in the Damman school. Every two weeks the community club holds card parties and dances in the school gymnasium.

Go and see for yourself, Miss Busby and the girls would be glad to have you.

On account of the departure of Beulah Kelly, who was vice-president of the association, it was necessary to nominate and elect another. Reita Faulkner was the one elected to fill this capacity. Han nah Berg who was previously elected secretary and treasurer, found the work too heavy for one; so it was made advisable to elect a treasurer. Marie Johnson was chosen for this position. Both Miss Faulkner.

AN HOUR WITH THE PRINCIPAL DEPARTMENT

Conferences aren’t so bad even if they do come at 4:15. At least that was the affirmation of all the students registered in the primary department on Thursday afternoon. They all wore rather long faces when they entered the training school but the “too much to do” look ironed out when they reached the large kindergarten room and found the tables spread.

It was arranged by Miss Shott, Miss Kindchy, Mrs. Whitfield, and Miss Morris, that the primary department should all come together for an hour’s good time, and a notice was posted urging all to be present. The primaries may be complimented on the fact that they do read the bulletin board, for all came.

While around the tables, which were arranged attractively in a family-like group interesting experiences were told; and many valuable pointers were gained by hearing how some other teacher met an unusual experience. Unusual experiences in the school room are like the unusual weather in one’s home, the usual is the exception. Almost everyone had something to tell that gave the listener a feeling that the pioneers were not all of picturesqueness, such as Dr. Meany pictured, sturdy and strong with axe and shovel to dig his way. Many pioneer experiences in the field of education in remote parts of the North were told.

Every one was interested they forgot that they were sitting on kindergarten chairs, but the committee of arrangements remembered their rules of pedagogy and the guests were asked to help push the tea tables back and make room for games. Miss Schneider played the piano for two lively games and promptly at 5:15 the guests departed.

It is the plan of the department to meet often in a most informal way just for a good time.

STARLING CATASTROPH.

Student Opinion’s cub reporter wandered into the president’s office just in time to find our usually calm executive secretary in a “nawful scrape.” Two stenographers and the janitor strove in vain to rescue her. Alas! ink! ink! mucilage! The bottle of ink and the bottle of mucilage had had a fight, spilled themselves all over the contents of their drawer in the desk. Papers were removed, but on our latest information the drawer and the mucilage held immovable the glass bottom of the broken bottle, the inkstand, and one good piece of chalk!

The Damien school closed last Tuesday because of an epidemic of scarlet fever. Most of the practice teachers returned to Kameha hall during their enforced vacation.

Thanksgiving at Kamola Hall.

A delightful Thanksgiving dinner party was given at Kamola Hall for the girls who remained in town during the Thanksgiving season.

The tables were arranged in "U" formation and were tastefully decorated with yellow chrysanthemums and lighted candles.

A sumptuous dinner was served at 2:30, after which guests adjourned to the dining room where charades and other games were participated in by all.

The invited guests were Miss Angeline Smith, Misses Elizabeth and Janet Black and Emily Forrestman.

From the large number of boxes brought by the morning before Thanksgiving the girls stayed over must have had some "good eats," as well as those who went home.

Thursday night at an "early" hour a delicious spread was given in Ethel Myers’ room. Real linen, silver, candles and favors made the repast a most enjoyable one. Those partaking were Marie Groese, Elsie Bosich, Della Leonard, Therese Queheck, Duccelina Caveltoto and Ethel Myers.

A breakfast on Friday morning was the way in which Frances Hamm and Grace Gregory enjoyed their boxes from home. Chives, cake and cookies, fruit and nuts, and hot chocolate made a very appetizing if unusual breakfast.

Honoring their guests Miss Sofia Barnes, of Kent, Cara Buecher and Alice Madsen entertained at dinner in their room Saturday evening. Grace West and Florence Nelson completed the party, all enjoying a fine time.

Maxwell-Beatty Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Vera Maxwell and Mr. Blake Beatty, of Ellensburg, was announced last week. Miss Maxwell was connected for about six years with the normal school, as recorder and secretary. They will make their home on the Beatty farm near here.

Thomas-Cheney Wedding.

The wedding of Miss Hazel Thomas to Lieutenant Joseph C. Cheney, took place Thanksgiving day, at 1 o'clock at the home of her parents.

The bride is a former member of our senior class and the groom is the son of B. D. Cheney, a lawyer of Montesano.

The bride looked charming in a travelling gown of brown velour and carrying yellow roses. She was attended by Miss Margaret Nesbit, Lieutenant Thomas Stevens a Delta Chi fraternity brother of Lieutenant Cheney was best man. Rev. Wm. J. Sharp performed the ceremony. After the wedding dinner Lieut. and Mrs. Cheney left for Tacoma.

Art Laboratory Moved.

It’s a long, long trail—and a steep one too—to the third floor of the administration building. And so the students of art have reached the same high level as those of music and agriculture.

The art room has up to this time, been in the manual training building. But this room was found to be too small, for the process of skillful brandishing a paint brush requires plenty of elbow room. Furthermore, the work of the students is so perfect that an abundance of sunshine is needed to detect the faults, such an abundance, in fact, that even the present room may have to be given up and another sought.

The former art room is now being transformed into a domestic science apartment. Showing that even a studio may become a kitchen.

ASSEMBLY

"Believe in the course you have chosen, master the fundamental principles of your calling and be honest, thorough and industrious," said Rev. Billington in his address to the students before Thanksgiving. He presented to his audience the unique proposition that life is a problem in geometry—a circle in which there are three straight lines to represent a triangle, the sides of which are the body, the mind and the morals. Another triangle, heredity, individuality and environment. We get the most out of life when we put the most in.

"A 150 pound man is worth just $8.00," was the startling declaration made by Rev. Young, to the student body, "for there is enough salt in him to fill a salt cellar, enough sugar to fill a sugar bowl, albuminoids for six eggs and other ingredients of commercial value."

"What does it take to make a man complete,
From the top of his head to the bottom of his feet."

The true measure of a man is one that is a friend to all mankind and one who aspires to climb to greater heights mentally, morally and spiritually.

The history of the Red Cross was given by the sixth grade of the Training School, in Thursday morning assembly.

The life of Florence Nightingale and her work in the Crimean war and the noble work of Clara Barton in the Civil war, were told by the children of each. Each told a part of the story which made it more interesting.

Dewey Jordan, our fellow student during the 1st quarter, has passed his examinations and has been accepted in the quartermaster’s corps. He will be stationed at Fort Lawton.
